Americans pour out problems; Carter takes 42 phone questions

Washington (UPI) - Jimmy Carter spent two hours listening to America on the telephone Saturday, taking some scoldings and some tributes, commiserating with job-seekers and the elderly and the ill in a free wheeling exercise in democracy

An estimated 9 to 91/2 million attempts were made to reach Carter at the White House But only 42 people from 26 states made it all the way

Carter sketched out some policy points, too, saying that he will soon try to make relations with Cuba more normal and he had no intentions of extending any Vietnam era pardons to others not included in his initial program

Problems, pains, fears

But much of the unprecedented radio phone-in program - called "Ask President Carter - was an outpouring of the problems, pains and fears of citizens looking for presidential help.

Some, lake the woman whose father is dying of cancer without benefit of an outlawed pain-killer, were poignant. Some were trivial. All got his response or his promise that an expert in the field would call them Monday.

The President in turn warmed to the "open presidency" format and let listeners in on a few personal tidbits about himself: he broke a collarbone in Navy karate training, for example, and his favorite way of relaxing is to walk in the woods "holding hands with my wife" and looking for arrowheads.

He also told one critical caller from Maryland the Carters "are not mooching off the American taxpayer" by living in the White House, defended the integrity of his unemployed son, Chip, and said he's too old now to take a trip into space with the astronauts

'I liked it'

At the end, Carter told Walter Cronkite, moderator of the CBS radio broadcast, "I liked it.

"The questions phoned here by the peo-ple all over the country are the kind you never get in a press conference . . my inclination would be to do this again in

The phone calls, processed through a special toll-free number - 900-242-1611 - poured in from all points of the compass, from the eastern seaboard to Hawaii, Michigan and Florida, and the voices came over in every accent of America Carter first-named the youthful-sounding ones, called the older ones "ma'am" and "siz "

They called him "Mr. President," and many test time to say "Gad bloss you" or to essented him at his performance. Some arised him at his hearten.

It appeared their were no crank calls or obsenties to deal with Broadcast of each conversation was tape-delayed for seven seconds and CBS had a vice president manning a silver cutoff button in a nearby control room to disconnect any such call If he ever used it, the nationwide radio audience couldn't tell

'New approach'

Introducing the program, Cronkite called it "a new approach to communications between the President and the people," and he promised to be "ruthless" in cutting off "long-winded"

He was He broke in on a number of people who tried to press a point beyond Carter's response — including one man debating whether the term "drug addict" should be used as a pejorative and chided one young woman who called to complain she had been unable to get a civil service job

"The best way to get a job," he said after Carter had said goodbye to the woman, "is to knock on door, not to call the President on a national phone-in show.

But Cronkite noted the woman's way seemed effective since Carter assured her he'd have someone familiar with civil service job outlooks to call her

The President took that tack repeatedly as a grace note in dealing with personal-problem callers be could not help on the spot.

Cancer worry

A Trimty, N.C., woman called to tell him her father has just learned he has terminal cancer and to complain that the controversial pain-killing drug Laetrile is illegal in this country and medical insurance companies will not pay for it

"Us hard-working people can't afford treatment not covered by insurance,'

Carter suggested the drug could be obtained in Mexico and promised her "someone from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will call you Monday" to discuss the problem

When Cheryl Quinn of Cleveland called to say her Army veteran mother was having trouble collecting Korean War veterans benefits. Carter told her "she probably let her time run out under the GI bill" and there was little be could do But Cheryl, too, will get a followup call from someone in Washington

'Not mooching'

The President handled the sharpest personal question of the afternoon with apiomb when Nicholas Kniska of Lanham, Md, seked him why his son Chip, Chip's wife and child, were living in the White House "at taxpayer expense" and why Chip doesn't get a job Carter said all his family's personal expenses "are paid for out of our own pockets - food, clothing," and told Kniska. "I am not mouching off the American taxpayer

Although no hard news emerged from any of Carter's policy comments, he did make some clarifying points. Among them

LONDON (AP) - British survivors of the Romanan earthquake arrived home Saturday and told how their dinners and dart games fell to pieces as Bucharest buildings crumbled before their eyes Friday evening.

"I was cating stargeon on the 21st floor of the Intercontinental Hotel in Bucharest when the lights suddenly went out and the building began to shudder," said banker Bryan Last of Sunbury, England

We managed to escape to the ground floor by a fire exit and we wanted in the road. All around us buildings had collapsed. We had so spend the night outside the hotel in the open air and it was very cold."

The quake also interrupted dinner for antique dealer John Warth of Lendon,

Washington (AP) - During a time of agricultural plenty, the U.S. government paid farmers not to grow crops. Now the government is again considering such a plan — not because of bountiful harvests but due to a scarcity of water

Under a plan proposed by the Bureau of Reclamation, some farmers in the drouth-stricken Central Valley of California, Yakima Valley of Washington state and other parched western areas would be offered money to not use water they need to grow their

The water would be placed in a "water bank" and transferred via existing irrigation ditches and canals to farmers whose crops need it even more urgently

Under such a scheme, "some farmers might find it economically advantageous to just not go to the trouble of growing crops this year to make the water available to those who desperately need it," said E F Sullivan, acting bureau

Hearings Tuesday

Legislation to authorize $100 million for the program has been filed by Sen Henry Jackson, D-Wash, and will be the subject of Senate hearings Tuesday

The scheme is a means of redistributing water from farmers in drouth areas who grow annual crops such as most vegetables and pasture crops - to those with perennial crops, such as fruit trees and vines

Perennial farmers stand to lose considerably more from a severe drouth, such as the one currently plaguing the Pacific Northwest, than annual farmers who are able to sow and harvest their crops in one growing season

If fruit trees are killed by a drouth, they take years to replant, grow to maturity and become productive Jackson said he introduced the bill with Washington's Yakima Valley in mind, where valuable cherry and apple orchards face extinction because of present drouth conditions there

Applicable to Nebraska

But Sullivan said in an interview that the plan will work equally well in California's vast Central Valley and parts of Idaho, Nebraska and Kansas also suffering from a prolonged lack of

Sullivan gave an example of how it would work farmers with annual crops would be offered $150 for the water necessary to irrigate each acre of their land and perennial farmers could "buy" this water for $50 an acre. The difference between the $150 and the $50 would be made up by the federal government, Sullivan saıd

He said these figures are just approximate and would vary from location to location Sullivan said he believes this is the first time the government has ever proposed paying farmers not to grow crops to preserve water

Beginning in the 1930s and continuing through the early 1970s, the government

Water bank' studied paid farmers through a variety of subsidies not to grow certain crops as a means of curbing production

Not used since 1973

Although the program still exists on the books, it has not been used since 1973, when demands for agricultural exports and domestic needs began to outstrip crop surpluses

'The plan provides a means of saving some perennial crops that might otherwise go under," Sullivan said He said some fruit crops take as long as eight years to replace if their trees or vines are wiped out And he said the "water bank" approach would work in any area "where water could be released from one place and given to another" through an existing irrigation network

The program would be voluntary Farmers with annual crops would not be required to sell their water to fruit growers if they didn't want to, Sullivan deficient in water Of these four million, two million are very critical," he said. Although the water bank would be the major part of the $100 million program, Sullivan said that other plans will also be undertaken to get water to parched farms - such as drilling new wells and digging new irrigation canals Jackson said his bill would make the $100 million available to "equitably distribute available water in the drouth areas" under the bureau's jurisdiction He said that some $500 million might eventually be made available by Congress for drouth relief

'We know we are in an emergency situation" he said "We must have a short-term emergency program to ensure the long-range goals of keeping our farmers on the land preserving our agricultural productivity and saving our

Drouth aid agencies 'not meeting needs'

Washington (AP) - Congressmen from water-short states are complaining that federal agencies dealing with the drouth are not meeting their needs

'We can't make it rain," counters Robert Blair, spokesman for the main drouth relief agency, the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration

But critics say the agency refuses to use its broad authority to prevent the drouth and the economic losses it is causing from becoming worse

"They are a bigger disaster than the drouth," said Rep John Burton D-Calif, of the agency

14 states named

So far, former President Gerald Ford, and now President Jimmy Carter, has declared emergencies in portions of 14 states suffering from a lack of rainfall, some of them for almost three years Minnesota, Wisconsin, Virginia, West Virginia, Nebraska, California, Utah, Colorado, North Dakota, South Dakota, New Mexico, Michigan, Missouri and

To date, the FDAA has aided only the farmers, whose crops and livestock are threatened. Blair said "It's what we have been asked for and we have been providing," he said This aid takes different forms in the various states

But according to congressmen, the FDAA is not giving enough aid to farmers and is failing to take other initiatives. At the same time, some admit they aren t sure exactly what they need

Rep Robert Leggett, D-Calif, who heads an ad hoc drouth committee for the state's congresional delegation, said precautions are necessary "to preclude people from dying of thirst and to preclude orchards from being destroyed

Leggett noted California s $4 5 billion crop loss and said it was sure to affect the nation's economy through higher prices for vegetables California supplies 40% of the nation's vegetable supply
Yet he said, "We don't really know right now what kind of assistance we That's because the drouth is affecting different areas of the state in In Minnesota the criticisms are similar. The oats program for livestock feeding was allowed to lapse" said an aide to Sen Hubert Humphrey The US Department of Agriculture did not feel it had the authority, and more importantly the department did not want it " the aide said

Lot of confusion

'There has been an awful lot of confusion " the aide said "The government is reluctant to overcommit itself " The impasse between the states and the drouth relief agencies led 30 California congressmen to ask Carter to appoint a drouth coordinator at the White House Governors of drouth-afflicted states made a similar request, and Carter appointed assistant Jack Watson to head a White House task force on drouth

White House aide Rodgers Stewart. who works on the task force, demed it was created to prod the FDAA and other federal agencies

The FDAA, in exercising the disaster relief act has bent over backwards to handle the drouth." Stewart said

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) - Rescue workers dug through the ruins of collapsed apartment buildings Saturday looking for trapped survivors and victims of one of the strongest earthquakes ever recorded in Europe. Western diplomats estimated 2,000 to 3,000 people died in Bucharest alone.

The first official Romanian figures released Saturday night said 298 bodies had been found in Romania, which bore the brunt of Friday's quake. although damage and deaths were reported in neighboring countries

Nicolae President Ceausescu, who broke off a trip in Africa, inspected the avenue - Magheru Boulevard ruins, the Romanian news agency Agerpres said.

Ceausescu said a new computer center that collapsed and 16 wrecked apartment buildings were poorly built and "asked that an investigation be made (and) for the guilty to be most severely held responsible," Agerpres reported.

Outside the most heavily stricken areas in Bucharest. where clusters of people watched rescue operations. most residents appeared to be going about life as usual. although there were unconfirmed reports of panic buying and hoarding. Radio Bucharest said there was no cause for concern because cities unaffected by the quake were shipping bread. meat, mineral water and medicine to stricken cities.

The quake struck about 9:30 p.m. local time and registered 7.2 on the Richter scale. It jarred Romania and drove residents from buildings as far away as Moscow 920 miles to the northeast and Rome 700 miles to the southwest.

Diplomatic sources in Bucharest said U.S. medical students helping in hospitals estimated the death toll in the Romanian capital alone would go beyond 2,000 and perhaps exceed 3,000. They based their estimates on the number of casualties they saw coming in and on conversations with docfors, the sources said.

The Yugoslav Embassy estimated the Bucharest toli might reach 1,000.

The U.S. diplomatic mission quoted Radio Bucharest as reporting 72 persons known dead elsewhere in Romania and 1,700 people hospitalized in the capital city, of whom 1,200 were seriously injured. Radio

Brazil rejects U.S. aid

Brasilia, Brazil (UPI) -Brazil rejected Saturday a U.S. offer of $50 million in military aid because it was accompanied by a report on the status of human rights in Brazil which the government termed "slanted and unaccep-

Ambassador John Crimmins was called to the foreign ministry and handed a note in which Brazil rejected the offer of credit for purchase of military material

The note said the militarybacked government of President Ernesto Geisel rejected "in advance — any assistance in the military area that depends, directly or indirectly on prior examination by organs of a foreign government of matters, that by their nature are of exclusive competence of the Brazilian government.'

The U.S. Embassy Friday sent the Brazilian Foreign Ministry a memorandum on the U.S. government's credit proposal along with a copy of a report on the human rights situation in Brazil.

The Foreign Ministry said the human rights report "contains slanted and unacceptable comments and judgments." A U.S. diplomatic source said the report was "very mild."

Diplomats said the Brazilians objected more to the principal of the U.S. evaluating what they saw as an internal matter than to the wording of the report.

A spokesman for the Brazilian Foreign Ministry said the U.S. military aid was rejected and would continue to be rejected even if the U.S. government changed or broke any or all of the strings attached.

"It is a dead issue," he said. "Finished."

Two recent investigations by non-Brazilian organizations reported that although the torturing of prisoners has diminished under the administration of Geisel it continues to exist. Geisel has eased the iron-fisted control of his military predecessors who overthrew the civilian government of President Joac (Jango) Goulart in April 1964.

Back to basics

U.S. District Judge Albert G. Schatz låst week did more than instruct the State of Nebraska to either free Kearney bartender Donald Steinmark from the Penal Complex or retry him in 90 days on two drug charges.

Schatz properly lectured the veteran trial judge, Donald H. Weaver of Grand Island, on some not-so-fine points of what constitute "traditional and fundamental standards of due process."

That rebuke obviously extends to the six Nebraska Supreme Court judges who subsequently upheld Judge Weaver's actions. The seventh state Supreme Court judge, Hale McCown, was almost beside himself dissenting in the Steinmark case McCown now has judicial company.

The nub of this situation is there was only one witness against Steinmark in the non-jury trial. That accusing witness was a three-time convicted felon then under State Patrol retainer as an undercover narcotics agent.

The public has no ground for being offended by the state's use of informers to monitor and flush out illegal drug traffic. Nor even the fact the informer-agent might have done time.

What does seem elemental, however, is that prosecutions such as Steinmark's be based on more than the uncorroborated testimony of such a singular undercover operative.

Judge Weaver refused to permit Steinmark's lawyer to cross-examine the State Patrol's hired operative concerning his false testimony in a similar drug case. By precluding that line of inquiry, Judge Schatz held the trial court "denied the defendant's right of effective crossexamination, which 'would be constitutional error of the first magni-

Judge Weaver also refused to receive testimony from two Omaha police officers and a Douglas County deputy county attorney, who reportedly were ready to impeach the informer's reputation for telling the truth.

In Steinmark's case, the record further shows—and Judge Schatz underscored it—that the undercover agent's taxpayer-provided compensation was more or less dependent upon his success rate in fingering people.

It is no special wonder that Judge McCown was outraged. The wonder, and sadness, is that a few more of his associates were not comparably persuaded.

They are, for most citizens, the lastditch defenders of the Constitution and traditional, basic principles of justice.

Doubtless, some will see the federal court's decision as falsely upholding Steinmark as a heroic figure when the real heroes are tied-hands law enforcement officers. That would be sloppy, emotional thinking.

The overriding consideration here is not the reputation of a man, or his fate, but the processes which are invoked and brought to bear on that individual. If those processes are found constitutionally satisfactory to convict one, they can be used again to convict another, and another. Even you.

Panhandle more in need of help

The prospect of substantial amounts of spoiled grain at the Omaha market gives rise to the feasibility of a gasohol plant located very near that market. In Sarpy County, maybe.

Officials and businessmen of Sarpy County are attempting to promote a gasohol plant in their midst.

Other than the standard, persistent economic considerations related to basic gasohol production, a critical factor here must be the certainty of raw material supply. There can be considerable volatility in the amount of spoiled grain available, from year to year.

Agricultural products other than grain can, of course, be converted into gasohol.

Don Shasteen, Sen. Carl Curtis' administrative assistant, has cited potatoes and sugar beets.

These are field crops grown in abundance in Nebraska's Valley of the Nile — the North Platte River from the Wyoming border to Bridgeport.

If economic merits of gasohol plants in the Panhandle or in the Omaha metropolitan area are equal, the better policy would be to give the western area favorable consideration. It has less economic diversity than does the state's most populous region. And dispersal of economic development fits the Exon administration's industrialization strategy.

Hot news for Cambyses II

Every so often the careful newspaper reader comes upon a small article which carries such dramatic impact the reader is moved to a vocal outcry and then, perhaps, reflection.

A three-paragraph piece datelined Cairo caused such a stir here the other day.

It appears an Egyptian archeological team unraveled a mystery 2,500 years old: What ever happened to the mighty Persian army which King Cambyses II sent on an invasion course?

Discovery of thousands of bones, mixed with Persian spears and swords, suggests the army apparently was caught in a sudden, murderous sandstorm and perished — to the man — in a vain attempt to reach the safety of an oasis.

Think of it. An entire army of the world's greatest military power, at that time, vanishing, without a trace. How stunned Cambyses must have been. And frightened. These things simply are not supposed to happen in a world where man is the master of all he touches and surveys. A world such as ours, for example.

$6 million man just a trinket

By Sydney J. Harns

For years and years, I have been irritated by sophomoric scientists and their acolytes, with that same old story about the "price" of a human being.

They would inform us, with some relish, that each person is worth only 98c or maybe in a time of inflation, $2.98 at the most. They would arrive at this figure by reducing us down to our chemical components: so many cents for nitrogen, so much for calcium, so much for iron and sodium and whatever else is found in our molecules.

I always thought this was the most absurd diminution of the human being I had ever heard. And finally a news story that made my heart leap with joy came from another scientist — this one a biophysicist at Yale, who blew that whole reductionist myth back to the limbo it deserves

Actually, he said, "each human being is priceless," but if we wanted to be crass enough in estimate the value of a person in cash terms, a pound of human flesh alone would be worth over $11,000, and the whole body around $6

These prices merely cover "raw material" costs of the proteins, enzymes, hormones, amino acids and other estoeric biochemicals that constitute the living creature. To further translate this chemical supply into sensate, conscious and intelligent human cells might cost at least six thousand trillion dollars.

In addition, when we consider that a computer built to simulate the human mind would have to be almost as large as the earth itself, the cost is totally out of sight

Even TV's Bionic Man is a bargainbasement number, judged by the standard of creation. Among its many blessings, the greatest curse science has cast upon us is our devaluation of the human person in the cosmic scheme of things. Each of us is so valuable, in terms far more than money, that the $6 million man is just a trinket

'Do you promise to love, honor and obey till divorce do you part?'

By Robert D. Miewald

The call for improved institutional arrangements (to respond to drouth conditions), in the sense of social science plumbing, is too superficial because of the pressure put upon our way of conducting public business by the reality of scarcity.

The notion of tinkering with the machinery of government to provide painless payoffs for all participants is obsolete. Instead, what is required is a wholesale rethinking of a number of affordable priorities.

The era of abundance is over, despite assurances of politicians that their election will keep the good times rolling. And when scarcity is acerbated by an unanticipated shortage such as drouth, the question is not so much what remedial action we shall take, but rather whether any institutions can survive. And if they cannot, what shall we erect in their place?

The matter is all the more urgent in water resources management. Even in years of normal precipitation, the old ways of doing things are not good enough. In 1975 D. E. Mann noted that, in terms of the categories used by students of public policy, water policy is undergoing a drastic change which in turn will shake the foundations of water management institutions. The traditional approach has been "distributive;" that is, local entities have been able to support a variety of uncoordinated projects, of limited and sometimes questionable value, by tapping a general source of public wealth.

Distributive politics has always been gloriously wasteful, and by virtue of that prodigality, we have been able to avoid a number of unpleasant choices. The recent emphasis on environmental concerns, together with the perception of a scarcity of resources, underscores Mann's claim that "distributive politics defies even an approach to rationality. It disguises or masks the systemic consequences while relying on the total system through the treasury to provide the benefits to the local interests involved."

Water management institutions must now begin the distasteful work of imposing regulations upon our use of that resource.

Nebraska's experience

The limitations of institutional reform are illustrated by events in Nebraska. That state, through creation of multi-purpose resource management districts (Natural Resources Districts), has gone as far as one could hope in improvement of institutional arrangements.

Had they been created in an earlier decade, these new units of government might have experienced a relatively peaceful and prosperous existence by performing a range of essential services of a distributive nature for their predominantly rural constituents. However, they face a somewhat uncertain future because of the need for regulation of the state's most precious resource — its groundwater supply.

By 1975, the Legislature could no longer deny the need for groundwater regulation. Quite naturally, it passed the buck to the NRDs with the passage of a groundwater control act. The act empowers NRDs to institute restrictions upon well irrigation in areas of critically low reserves. The new power will certainly alter the benign image of the districts.

The issue has already been joined. Summer of 1976, the third dry summer in a row, saw several requests for imposition of groundwater controls. Even with new legislation, there was ugly talk of a "water war," and a few lawsuits pitted neighbor against neighbor over the receding water table. It is safe to assume neither the NRDs nor irrigators are agreed on what type of regulation should be pursued, especially since there is not even a consensus among Nebraska farmers that regulation of groundwater is a proper function of any government.

The following are excerpts from a paper delivered at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Denver last month. The author is associate professor and chairman of the Political Science Department at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The interesting point is that NRD's are acting like any other unit of government when faced with irreconcilable conflict; they are looking for the technological solution. If there is not enough water to go around, resolve the issue not by rationing that which is available but instead by "creating" more.

Now the districts appear fascinated by the possibility of "transbasin diversion." Though the plans are not as grandiose as those of the Texans who wish to reroute the Mississippi through Amarillo, Nebfaskans seem about to seek legal permission to move about large quantities of water within the state. That sort of public works project will involve considerable amounts of public funds, and it is uncertain whether urban interests will be as acquiescent as in the past. Already the diversion proposals have caught the attention of other users of water, and the problem of allocation will not be solved by engineering.

There is just not enough to go around, and no sleight can hide that fact.

In a world of limited resources, we will inevitably reach a stage where it will not be possible to pay off all groups in society. In relation to drouth-induced scarcity, the matter was brought out in an exchange of letters in the New York Times in 1976. Rep. Larry Pressler wrote to New Yorkers to describe the drouth in South Dakota

Rúnning on rain?

How does drouth become a public issue? One intriguing line of research has been ignored since it was suggested 50 years ago, by J.D. Barnhart ("Rainfall and the Populist Party in Nebraska", American Political Science Review). Drouth seems to stimulate extraordinary electoral behavior in the affected areas . . .

In Nebraska, elections since the turn of the century show a switch to the Democratic minority in 1908-10, 1934-38, 1948 and 1958. Excluding 1948, a plausible explanation for these outcomes could be rainfall shortages before or during the election.

The fact that Nebraska has just elected its first Democratic senator since 1934 is further evidence of such a trend. More research on these relationships is needed before any definite conclusions can be offered . . .

Obviously, voters are not anticipating that the new public officials will make it rain. The polls serve as a convenient place to express, in a socially acceptable manner, one's sense of frustration with weather conditions...

and to complain "urban interests in Congress have not been responsive to our needs for limited assistance during a time of great need." He was answered by Rep. Edward Koch of New York who pointed out that Pressler had been similarly unresponsive to the financial plight of New York City. He suggested cooperation to "deal with the natural, economic and government-inspired disasters that affect different regions."

The remarkable thing about this correspondence is not the connect of logislative log.

The remarkable thing about this correspondence is not the openness of legislative log rolling: it is the question of who is paying for the relief of this alliance of farmers and city folks. Who is left to pick up the tab? Can we afford to construct public policy in this manner, when it appears every group in society has some legitimate claim on the public fisc?

Of course, we could resolve the problem of distribution of scarce resources through establishment of a centralized allocation system. Such a structure, however, would be alien to a number of values which have sustained Americans for 200 years. But who is to say we would not abandon those values under conditions of real or imagined stress?

Norman Wengert in 1976, in a summation of a long study of resource politics, wrote. "If the doomsayers are only partly right, the issue of what kind of a political system can equitably achieve radically different resource consumption levels while preserving democratic, egalitarian values, is of prime importance."

And to those who would begin the work of reconciling the reality of a delicate, finite environment with individual values, he warned. "I would suggest that our social and political systems may be equally fragile, and that a cavalier disregard of some traditional political values and callous tampering with public confidence in the political system can have equally serious consequences."

In our desire — and it is an intelligent desire — to avoid deprivation caused by drouth, we must exercise extreme caution in modifying the political structure.

Right now, we are probably not very well prepared for the crunch. Writing in 1962, I. K. Fox and L. Craine found the extensive literature on resource management to be concerned largely with institutional symptoms. Since that time, we have not made much progress in developing means by which the public can participate intelligently in resolving questions of resource allocation.

We expand our energy on institutional cosmetics when it should be clear that institutions cannot be arranged so that we can all be supported in the manner to which we have become accustomed. Allocative patterns will not be any easier to change under a crisis caused by drouth or some other calamity.

Luck may give out

One need not have too fevered an imagination to project scenarios demonstrating the disastrous effects of drouth on our social and political system. In the 1930's, we were either resilient or lucky enough to overcome the combined impact of prolonged drouth and economic depression. The next time, we may not be so resilient or lucky. And no one can deny the susceptibility of our economy to outside shocks, not the least of which is the still unresolved "energy crisis."

So, if the rains do come next month, and if the Saudis keep down the price of oil another year, it would still be extremely foolish of us not to consider whether, even if it is not until 1995, we might not face another conjunction of economic and agricultural collapse, a collapse which could mean an epochal turning point in history.

Leffer PTA

An article by Jack Kennedy (February 27) discussed the possible dissolution of the Parent-Teachers Association (PTA) at Millard Leffer Junior High This article attributed certain statements to us, even though we were never interviewed by Kennedy.

Aside from the questionable practice of paraphrasing persons who have never been interviewed, we are concerned about two factual inaccuracies in the story.

First, the story indicates that the Lefler PTA board voted to abolish the PTA. In reality, the board adopted a motion putting before Lefler parents the question of whether the PTA should be dissolved or continued. Such a procedure is required by the state PTA by-laws. The Lefler hoard has made a concerted effort to educate parents about both sides of the question so that they may make an informed choice.

Second, the story suggests that the principal concern of PTA opponents at Lefler is the large portion of local dues which goes to the state and national PTA. If he had talked with Lefler parents, Kennedy would have learned that the main reasons some parents want an independent organization is because they now pay double dues for their elementary and secondary children. Also, some Lefler parents feel an independent parent group would have greater autonomy and flexibility.

David and Lucy Buntain Millard Letter PTA Co-Presidents Lincoln

The Miliard Lefter situation was cited by education writer Jack Kennedy as one example of controversy within the PTA. Kennedy attributed to David and Lucy Buntain material contained in a Lefter PTA Report signed by Mr and Mrs. Buntain as co-presidents.

The report stated that the Lefter PTA executive board "resolved" to dissolve the local PTA organization. In his story, Kennedy said the executive board "voted" to dissolve the organization. This was an erroneous peraphrasing of the statement.

Complaints about local dues going to the state and national PTA came from sources other than the Buntains, Kennedy says. Unfortunately, the positioning of the comment in the news story might have led to the erroneous impression that this complaint came from Mr. and Mrs. Buntain.—Editor.

Judging strange

While it is never easy to dispute the judge's decision in any event, we feel our overall treatment and consideration received as contestants at the recent Lincoln "Autorama" sponsored by the International Show Car Association (ISCA) is worthy of some reflection.

We are both proud owners of

we are took proud owners of two fine, mostly original, late '50 automobiles, a 1958 Continental Mark III and a 1958 Cadillac Series 75 sedan, and as such we enjoy showing them off at this show. We did not, however, appreciate the discrimination for our hobby and the strange classification and judging techniques employed.

For example, how were we to know that a display is often more important than the vehicle itself and can often make the difference between success or failure? How were we to know that our vehicles would be competing with wrongly classified customized and or failure? How were we to know that our vehicles would be competing with wrongly classified customized and foreign sports entries even though those classes themselves weren't even filled? For example, does a Jaguar belong in a luxury limousine class? Is a Granada-Monarch combination not just as much customized as a 1958 T'Bird with a recarpeted trunk?

Admittedly, when a person with an antique, classic or special interest original auto enters one of these affairs he knows at once he will be at a distinct disadvantage to the customs, hot rods, etc. However, just how much of a disadvantage can often only be fully realized when it is too late, and if you're not an ISCA member, forget it!

We feel it is to the ISCA's distinct advantage to stop ignoring the old cars hobby and make it a regular part of their show.

Showdown near between Carter and the hawks

By Joseph Kraft

There now emerges a clear pattern of confrontation between the President and the hawks who have traditionally ruled the roost in the Senate. Battles are due this week in the vote on the nomination of Paul Warnke to be disarmament negotiator, and later over the Panama treaty and the recognition of Vietnam.

These tests come out not a moment too soon. For the administration is sure to win and only a showing that the hawks are vulnerable can break the crude ideological division which now blocks rational dis-

The Senate hawks are a leftover of the cold war. They emerged in the days of Harry Truman as sensible persons reasoned security lay in augmented U.S. military strength and in granting unusual discretion to the Presi-

That sensible position has since been deeply eroded. Viet-nam dramatized the limits of military power. Watergate showed the dangers of lodging too much discretion in the White House. Long before, development of huge arsenals of nuclear weapons by the U.S. and U.S.S.R. raised the question of whether either could achieve a significant edge in strategic arms.

Occasionally these developments cracked through to upset the grip of the hawks on the Senate. Majorities were mustered against more commitment in Vietnam, and for the odd cut in military who correctly saw the spending. But the hardline challenge of Communist arguments remained salient as aggression. They rightly instruments for internal

Wholesale land exploitation

We are assuming that the people farming land that should never have seen a plow are only hoping the land will last their lifetime Future generations be damned, only now counts! Someone, somewhere, should begin to think about this problem

Even with irrigation, the land is being destroyed, but few seem to realize it. Stories have been coming out also that underground water in Holt County is being poisoned to the point where it will be useless for anything but irrigation. Nitrates leaching into the soil from fertilizer . . . is showing up in alarming quantities

Are we being fair to future generations by our wholesale exploitation of the land?

Keep the taxes even

(The balance between sales and income tax levies) does impose fiscal discipline. The need for such a brake is evident in the fact that with no changes in the present rates -3% on sales, 17% on incomes — the state will be able to finance a budget 8% higher than currently, and that is beyond the higher costs which inflation alone would exact

- Norfolk Daily News

Protecting teachers

It is apparent that teachers may now be dismissed in their first two years because someone doesn't like the way they comb their hair or the church they attend, and if (LB188) passes it is possible such probation could be extended for a total of five years. If administrators and boards haven't weeded out incompetents in two years, they haven't done their job. And even after that, while tenure provides protection and due process, just cause is broad enough so that the worst can be removed.

struggles within the two par-

On the Republican side, conservatives from the South and West, notably Barry Goldwater, used the hawk position to capture the party from the Eastern liberals. On the Democratic side, Southern veterans such as John Stennis of Mississippi and traditional liberals such as Henry Jackson of Washington used the hawk position as a holding device against the insurgents who captured the party in 1972 and

In the Senate today, consequently, there are at least a score of hardcore hawks including six Southern Democrats and about 15 Republicans from the South and West. The hardcore has tremendous pulling power with numerous other senators who have preferred to avoid exposure on issues at the cutting edge of party strife.

Thus all aspirants to Republican leadership positions, most recently Sen Howard Baker, have stayed with the hawks. Another dozen Southern and traditional Democrats also went along with the hawks to protect their political flanks.

Precisely because national instrument of party conflict, the arguments remained crude and oversimplified. Nothing makes the point better than the hearings on the nomination of Warnke. The most complex technical issues were reduced by hawks to primitive hard-soft choices. Questions most sensitive to rapid technological change were measured by the kind of consistency Emerson rightly called the hobgoblin of little minds.

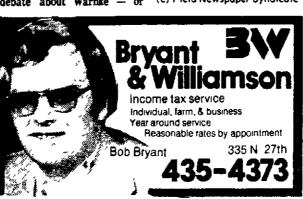

Thus, when Warnke said positions he held as an advocate in the Defense Department a decade ago and subsequently as an outsider would necessarily be different from those he held as a spokesman for the whole Carter administration, that simple truism was represented as a sign of disingenuousness.

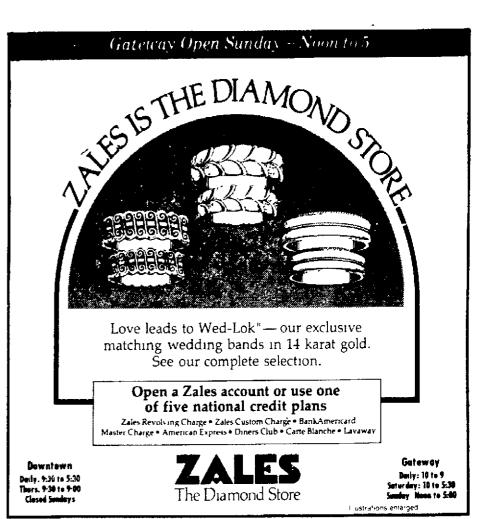

No one can look back on the debate about Warnke - or secretary of defense or head of the Central Intelligence Agency - and feel anything but dismay. The consolation is that Carter is certain to win the upcoming battle on Warnke and, when they come up, on Panama and Vietnam For as President — and a Southern President to boot — he can win over a great many of those who have voted with the hawks out of fear they would otherwise be called soft on communism.

Once they can no longer win with crude terror tactics, the hawks will readjust, and it will be possible to talk in a concrete way about the wide variety of different means including some increase in defense spending as well as more arms control necessary to meet the continuing challenge of Soviet military power

Colleen McCullough

Writers' rigorism pays off

By Dolores Barclay

New York (AP) - She sits behind a massive desk in her publisher's office, with an infectious smile that could dazzle a sunbeam, pushing around little neat packages of sugar. The smile becomes a monstrously wholesome laugh. And why not? Colleen McCullough is having fun being the recipient of the biggest paperback deal in publishing history. Her novel, "The Thorn Birds," was sold last week for $1.9 million to Avon Publishing.

She'll get 50%. Her $5,000 advance from Harper & Row seems small by comparison. But for this ruby-haired Australian neurophysicist, it's more money than she's ever known in her 39 years.

"I thoroughly enjoyed writing it," she said. "But I never thought it would do this. I haven't really been able to assimilate all the money. It's just very nice to realize I'm not going to have to worry about poverty-stricken old

Career change

Six months ago Miss McCullough decided to change careers and enter nursing school - something she was professionally overqualified to do, but a field she wanted to work in with a passion. Now, she's not too sure the staid London hospital that accepted her will want a "notorious character" on its staff, once she concludes promotional teurs. The novel hits bookstores May 18.

She smiles again, revealing tiny, pearl-like teeth against her unblemished and wellscrubbed complexion. From all the exuberance Colleen displays, one would never know the rigors she put herself Through to complete this 530page romantic saga of three generations of an Australian

2"I survived on sugar," she said, picking up a package for her coffee. "Everyone is fascinated because most swriters agonize when they write. I don't because I suffer from verbal diarrhea, not verbal constipation. And I write like I talk - on and on and on. "Once I wrote 30,000 words at one sitting. Not necessarily good words," she was quick to point out. "I was so absolutely obsessed and consumed by the story, and I was afraid that if I didn't stay with it, I'd lose it." 'She worked 14 hours, two days at a time on the book, in addition to a full day's employment. Then she'd collapse for a day and start all over again.

Nine weeks of work

Like the proverbial mother hen. Miss McCullough hatched her 280,000-word creation in hine weeks last summer. She was still working in neurophysiology at Yale University when she began "The Thorn Birds" - a story site had carried in her head for over four years. It is the story of the Clearys, especially Meggie, the only daughter. The saga begins in the early 1900s in Australia, and crosses the editinents to London and the Vatican.

At is her second novel and. Colleen says, is "very loosely" based on a few family emperiences Her first novel. "Tim," about a middle-aged Woman's love affair with a hetarded boy, was a modest saccess three years ago

Before "Tim." McCullough never considered publishing her writing because she feared her editors would try to mold her into something she wasn't. She also feared "peaking too soon." and fading from the literary scene like many young writers have done

She hopes her delay in publishing will help her cope with the mystique of instant success "Success turns one's head when you haven't gotten it all together." she said "It takes the first 30 years of one's life to tie it together. I hope at 39 I'm mature enough to cope with it "

Ned's got a dream; nobody can let the air out of sails

By Jules Loh

Thomaston, Maine (AP) -Fish house punch is like the can carry. rocky coast of Maine: enticing. But, beware.

One evening in the warm glow of fish house punch, Ned Acerman had an idea. Why not build a big boat, a coasting schooner, a cargo vessel out of the last century? Why not build it of wood, as in the old days, go into business and revive the age of sail?

That is just what Ned Acerman determined to do.

His schooner is taking shape at a fine old Maine boatyard, itself an anachronism, and the shape it is taking is awesome. Heavy wooden ribs resemble the upturned carcass of a great sea creature.

"If I didn't think I could make a living with it, I wouldn't have dared start," Acerman said. "But I didn't go out and make an economic survey. The boat is its own reason for being.

"There is white pine to be hauled from New England to the Carolinas, yellow pine and cypress to be shipped back, oyster shells to be hauled from the Chesapeake, granite to go wherever anyone wants to build a breakwater. The possibilities grow.

Who knows, in these days of semiprecious fuel Ned Ackerman might be onto something. 'I think if I make even a halfway go at it," he said, "there's going to be a stampede right behind me."

The boat will be 97 feet long, 23 feet four inches across the beam. Its two masts will rise 90 feet from the deck. Its sails, honest canvas, will be foreand-aft, as a schooner's should but if the Caribbean hardwood trade looks good,' said the skipper, "I have some square sails in mind, to run with the tradewinds."

John Leavitt, before his death, was Acerman's inspiration, friend, consultant, and partner in fish house punch.

Acerman is a studious 34year-old romantic with master's degrees in Old English, Middle English and Anglo-Norman French, hardly the sort whose ambition would be to haul cargo on the Atlantic coast in a wooden sailing ship.

Seven years ago his ambition was to get a doctorate. He was hard at it, nose buried in musty tomes, when he came upon a book by Leavitt: "Wake of the Coasting Schooners."

Sketch to schooner

"I was taken by a sketch of a schooner, on page 140, and thought I might build a scale model of it just for something to do with my hands while I was immersed in all that academic work. I wrote to John, he wrote back. We met and became friends."

Acerman decided to build a model of a pilot schooner, then, perhaps when he retired, build the real thing. He was teaching school. School teaching was dull. What the hell. Why not build the real

Teeny-weeny grain tester is repaired

Willmar, Minn. (UPI) - A farmer asked Dr. Richard Nelson to repair his grain tester and Nelson, a dentist, directed him to a hardware store.

But the farmer had the right man to begin with, as Nelson now tells it.

Here is Nelson's story as it appears in the publica-"Dental Economics:

'In early August, one of my farmer-patients came to the office insisting that I see him immediately. He said he had broken his grain tester and wanted it repaired at once since harvest time was near.

"After several minutes of pleading by the patient, we finally realized that he indeed was in the correct 'repair

"It seems that for the past 15 years, he had placed a seed of grain between the maxillary and mandibular cuspids and bit down. If the seed fractured cleanly, the grain was ready. If the seed merely dented or became gummy, he waited.

'That morning he had attempted the usual testing method and fractured the maxillary cuspid off at the gum

"So I fixed the tooth, and now my farmer-patient is back in the field testing grain and getting the corn combined at 18% moisture.

ficial Tass news agency Satur-day attacked Sen. Frank The news agency sai Church, D-Idaho, Saturday for Jews and also said antisemitism was widespread in the United States

The Tass dispatch was seen as part of an escalating war of words between the Soviets and the U.S. on the human rights issue

It appeared less than 24 hours after the authoritative government newspaper Izvestia accused two U.S. diplomats of working for the CIA with the help of Jewish activists in the Soviet Union.

Church sponsored a resolution, adopted 92-0 by the Senate Tuesday, which protested "recent beatings, imprisonment and harassment of Soviet Jews and other minorities trying to obtain emigration visas to reunite with their families." "This is pure balderdash,"

Tass said, and added the resolution could not be dismissed since it "is almost official, coming as it does over the signature of a U.S.

"Most employes -- and surveys say they range from 60 to 90% — feel that they're underpaid," Lawler commented. "People often have an incorrect perception of what the labor markets are. And they have very positive pictures of their own performance."

He feels that the secrecy Americans have about their paychecks is one of the reasons for this, and it's also one of the reasons discouraging more employe participation in the design of pay systems.

The practice might let the Employes also may be given employes know what others some say in when and how they are being paid. And although receive pay raises. Instead of this attitude for secrecy has having a raise tacked on to a weekly paycheck, some management.

Managers assume that they will set wages, and workers can take it or leave it. Lawler maintained that: "Management usually assumes that lower-level employes don't have the necessary information to make such decisions (about pay), and can't be trusted to keep the company's interest in mind if they did."

His research, and that of others working in the field, seems to indicate that the reverse is true.

But don't expect the nation's employers to start handing out blank checks to workers.

Antarctic meteorite ultimate pet rock

By Bruce Ingersoll (c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago - Geologist Edward Olsen ranks it as the ultimate pet rock - a meteorite that flashed through the atmosphere as a flery, falling star and then smashed into Antarctica, 600 miles from the South Pole.

For Olsen, finding this meteorite was the discovery of a lifetime, comparable to capturing a shooting star.
"This is a P.T. Barnum meteorite in the sense that it's big like the fat lady in the circus," exulted Olsen, chairman of the geology department at the Field Museum of Natural

One of biggest finds

In fact, he said it's the largest meteorite ever found in Antarctica, weighing 898 pounds, and one of the largest stone-meteorite finds in the world. Its age and the date of its plummet from outer space have yet to be determined. Olsen and his research colleagues - William Cassidy. a University of Pittsburgh geologist, and Keizo Yanai of the Japanese National Institute of Polar Research spotted fragments of the spotted fragments of the meteorite Jan. 20 as they were cruising over the ice cap in a Navy helicopter.

We swung around and put down on the ice," Olsen said.
"We all ran off in different directions to pick up pieces. Everybody was shouting, 'Hey, I've got one.'

"I felt like a kid in a candy

Thirty-three pieces were collected, he said. The biggest weighed 250 pounds. If the meteorite were reconstructed it would be a burnt-black sphere of rock four or five feet His party also found 10 other meteorites in the so-called "blue-ice" regions of the ice cap northwest of McMurdo, the main U.S. research outpost on Antarctica. These were much smaller, however, averaging 10 pounds each.

There are two principal theories about the original of meteorites, Olsen said. One is that they are fragments from much larger celestial bodies. such as planets or moons. The other is that meteorites are primordial accumulations of matter that never got together to form planets or moons.

Meteorites have much greater chemical and mineral variety than lunar rock samples," Olsen said.

They are scientifically valuable, he said, because they provide insights into the formation of the solar system some 4.5 billion years ago. Olsen said an estimated 70

For, as anyone but a confirmed Earth-lubber knows, sunlight exerts pressure in the form of photons, which are massless particles. When photons are reflected off a surface, they create a force much as wind against a sail. Indeed, even sail-less spacecraft can be blown off course by sunlight pressure. On a long journey, to

Draft Idea Rejected

America's armed forces continue to have difficulties meeting manpower needs with volunteers, the majority of the public rejects the idea of returning to the draft.

Currently, 54% of Americans do not think the armed forces should return to the draft, while about one third, 36%, feel the nation should reinstitute a selective service program immediately. And among those people who would be most directly affected - 18to 24-year-old males — sentiment against returning to the draft is overwhelming.

Opposition to a resumption of the draft is the prevailing opinion among nearly every sub-group of Americans, led by the college-educated, young people, and those in the upperincome brackets. However, opinion among older people (more than 50 years old) and Southerners is about evenly divided.

Politically, Democrats and independents vote heavily against reinstating the draft, but among Republicans opinion is split.

One alternative to the draft that has been proposed - that of universal service for all young men in either the military or nonmilitary work - has the support of two-thirds of the public. Furthermore, 40% support universal service for women.

The survey findings are based on in-person interviews Feb. 4-7 with 1,586 adults in more than 300 scientifically selected localities. (c) 1977 Field Enterprises

Discharge upgrading is planned

Washington (UPI) - President Carter is planning a blanket upgrading of otherthan-honorable discharges given Vietnam era veterans despite opposition from the military, government sources said Saturday.

The services wanted individual review of all cases in order to avoid "severe in-

White House counsel Robert Lipshutz said the program, an extension of the pardon for draft evaders announced by Carter the day after he took office, "will be done on a broader basis rather than case-by-case. Lipshutz did indicate, however, that desertion cases punished under the military justice system still will be considered individually.

Irrigation developments creating boomtown feeling in SW Nebraska

By Dominick Costello

Imperial - Southwestern Nebraska is booming, thanks to the rapid development of irrigation, but there are some problems in the midst of prosperity.

Local grain elevators in the threecounty area making up the Upper Republican Natural Resources District (NRD) are expanding and several new ones have been built. At least one elevator was built by a group of farmers who didn't want to wait out the long lines during the fall harvest rush.

Ronald Milner, NRD manager reels off a list of new crops being produced in Chase, Perkins and Dundy counties.

New crops introduced

The area, traditionally ranching with some wheat, now has 6,000 acres of sugar beets, 8,000 acres of dry edible beans, 17 pivots of popcorn containing 130 acres each, some potatoes, alfalfa, irrigated pasture and a lot of corn.

Jerry Winkler, a soil conservationist at Benkleman, estimated that as many as 10 new pivot sprinklers are being set up every week. "We won't get final figures until six months have passed but we are getting a lot of requests for information on water capacity of soil in the area," be

Milner estimates his NRD now has 2,-300 center pivots and an equally large number of gated pipe irrigation systems. imperial, one of the largest communities in the three counties, is also experiencing a boom. In the last year, at least 40 new families have moved in, 23 new businesses have sprang up, a new hospital was built and there was a buge increase in building permits.

Harold Stokey, a farmer and irrigation booster, is proud of his town of Imperial and the role he has played in seeing it grow. But he admits there are problems and not everyone loves growth.

Sleepy town gone

"There are some old-timers who hate it. They liked their sleepy little town. We have some blowing dust mostly become it takes a while for a rancher to learn how to become a send farmer and there is concern about the decline in the water table," he said. Stokey was one of the early irrigators putting down a donen center pivots on a 25,300 acre ranch. The ranch has been sold and soon will have 100 center pivots

Some center pivots have been put on poor sites for irrigation. Many fields have said blowing out of the corners because of survice attempts to farm what

Soil Conservation Service specialist

"We don't have many sites like that but they can be a real problem, particularly in a pasture where you can't plow them shut," he said.

The decline in groundwater levels left some older wells sucking air during last summer's irrigation season but most new wells are drilled to depths that should avoid that problem for years.

Water levels decline

"The decline in water levels has been about a foot a year, but some areas have dropped 24 feet since the early 1950's," said Milner.

However, according to Milner, farmers have been cooperative in efforts to conserve groundwater supplies. Only minimum amounts of water needed is used and runoff is controlled through reuse pits.

"We have at least 40 farmers using flow meters on their wells and many are using moisture blocks to tell them when they need to irrigate which helps to cut water use," Milner said.

A hearing on proposed water controls will be in Imperial on March 24.

Stokey, Milner and others are concerned but not frightened by the groundwater decline. "We have to get our tail in gear and conserve water but we have at least 30 to 45 years' supply. New technology and new crops will undoubtedly extend that for some additional years," Stokey predicts.

Milner thinks the first water casualties will be the streams of Stinking Water Creek, Frenchman and Upper Republican rivers. "The streams will disappear first. The decline, if it comes, will be gradual with some areas being dewatered while others have plenty for many years," he said.

Landowners are moving to seed down the corners of fields which are currently a major source of blowing sand. The NRD is selling 50,000 trees this year and the Soil Conservation Service is helping farmers design and plant windbreaks.

6% bedge

Gov. J. J. Enou based his budget recommendations on a 4% bedge. That translates into $35.8 million, which the governor subtracted from the projected revenues of a 3% state sales tax and 17% state income tax.

Exon warned the legislators it would be deagerous to spend any more than what was left (about $473 million) because of economic instability. Warner says a 6% hedge may be about right. For sure, he says, it shouldn't go below $%, which is one reason he wants to increase the minimum overlevy.

He will attempt that through an amendment proposed for LEFF, due for floor consideration soon. That bill, intruduced by Sea. Front Lewis of Believes, seeks to transfer the rate-

Warner doesn't agree with that idea. He says it is better to have the board handle the rates. If he succeeds in getting the overlevy minimum boosted from 3% to 5%, he says, he will follow with an amendment to strike the original language about switching rate setting authority.

But, says the Waverly senator, his second objective will be achieved no matter what happens to the amendment. He says he is anxious - as the Budget Committee starts making spending decisions — to know the attitude of his

Yes and no

Yes and no are the answers from legislative officials and lobbyists.

All lobbyists will be required to report fees and salaries under the new measure, which goes into affect in July under the Political Accountability and

He said his board would have to decide what portion of his salary would be apportioned for lobbying. He said it could be 60% and the League of Nebraska Municipalities could decide their director was paid 20% for lobbying.

The result would be that the dollar figures could be compared, Stromer said, "but what will it mean?" Herbert Schimek, who lobbies for the Nebraska Education Assn., agreed the figures for organization lobbyists will be subjective. He hopes to keep a log of his time and expenses to give an accurate accounting.

Still estimate

Even with a log, he said, he is sure to forget something and end up estimating. David Tews, an independent lobbyist and attorney, presently reports only that he is on legal retainer. He said he will change his procedures next year and sign two contracts with his clients - one for lobbying and one for legal service.

In 1969, Tews reported everything. He was virtually the only one to do so and his name was in the headlines, he said.

Even nonattorney free-lance lobbyists will have problems figuring what to Legislative Clerk Vincent Brown said the new law is still ambiguous. "We are getting essentially now what we will get then," he said.

Opened eyes

"Maybe my eyes will be opened, but I doubt it." Brown said.

However, it appears some clarity will come from the new law. Vernon Pearson, a member of the board of the Liftle Blue Natural Resources District, tried to discover last week whether he had to file as a lobbyist because he appeared at committee hearings and occassionally talked to senators. Brown was unsure whether Pearson would have to file this year, but he said Pearson will definitely have to register next year.

Brown, Stromer, Tews and Schimek questioned the need for the new law. "I hope it is not a bunch of overkill," Schimek said.

Tews and Schimek said out-of-state lobbyists do not understand how a lobbyist can operate in Nebraska when every vote is recorded.

"We have the most wide-open fish bowl in the country." Tews said. "Nebraska is so clean people can't believe it.

That would suggest that newsmen need to develop better relations with the lower courts, he said.

Sociologist challenges negative image of mobile home dwellers

Mobile home dwellers suffer which prevents some segments interaction with neighbors is of not from an identity crisis but from an image problem.

The reason, according to Dr. Larry Landis, is one perpetuated through print media beginning as early as the 1930s.

Landis, an urban sociologist at Drake University at Des Moines, said the negative and incorrect - picture of the mobile home dweller is the result of images similar to one presented by Time magazine when one of its articles described mobile homes as "little more than outhouses on

That is an image which continues today, Landis told the persons attending the Nebraska Manufactured Housing Institute at the group's annual convention at the Lincoln Hilton Saturday.

It is important to destroy the stereotype, Landis said, because "already barely onefourth of the population can afford to own a home...the cost of new homes is going up and the cost of older homes is going up perhaps even more," because of the high cost of home maintenance and repair work.

Mobile homes are not cheap or inexpensive - but affordable housing for many, he added.

Jobs for Jerry

The effort to find meaningful work for the lieutenant governor continues.

Jim Exon had Jerry Whelan warm up as chairman of task forces battling the energy shortage and the paperwork surplus. Now he has put his sidekick in charge of a drouth task force. When the job description lists only presiding over the Legislature and stand-in duty if the boss leaves the state, a lieutenant governor can't be blamed if he is glad there have been crises which need assaulting by task force.

There are two years remaining in the term, and the governor must be constantly on the alert for problems his lieutenant can tackle.

Some tasks to force

Since the governor is busy with a line to hold and a good life to preserve, the suggestions below are offered in the spirit of public service.

Whelan might be assigned to lead a Husker Basketball Task Force (acknowledging that if the football team ever finishes in the Big Eight's second division, the situation would be so grave that the governor himself would have to head the task force)).

Exon might order Whelan to form a task force to assist those potential Republican candidates who can't make their yard signs until they know which race would avoid a primary election confrontation with Charley Thone.

Here's a REAL challenge

A Whelan led task force could try to make the U.S. Senate interesting enough to satisfy Ed Zorinsky.

The lieutenant governor could head a task force assigned to check the chances of peace in our time among the members of the Public Service Commission.

Whelan could conduct a task force investigation of the persistent leaks in the Statehouse roof. (If he fails to solve the drouth, he would have the consolation of knowing he relieved the roof-leak crisis.)

Political paragraphs

 "Someday," Sen. Oryal Keyes of Springfield said last week, "this Legislature has got to rise up and do something." Decisions on taxation, public power and water have been deferred for more study. Keyes, who sometimes hits his thumb, hit the nail on the head this time. • Jack Pittman, comptroller for the State Roads Dept., loosed this word at the agency's Budget Committee hearing last week: definitize. Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln believes women legislators should be able to use the more convenient men's rest room in the West Lounge across the corridor from the chamber, rather than the women's facility down the hall. When Mrs. Marsh uses the lounge; she posts a member of the State Patrol security force at the door to interecept male traffic.

• Rep. John Cavanaugh of Omaha, a former state senator, gave this quote to the Omaha Sun: "Congress isn't much different from the Nebraska Legislature . . . There's a lot of pettiness, sure. Twenty percent of the members are incompetents. But the other 80% are very good people. I like

Crisis of Confidence in schools

There is widespread pessimism, almost fear, among U.S. school administrators.

Leaders in the trenches must rise up and convince the American public that the schools have not failed dismally, person after person said during the recent American Association of School Administrators (AASA) convention in

The atmosphere was the most depressing since this writer began covering AASA 13 years ago. From top feoeral officials like education commissioner-designate Ernest Boyer down to an overall-clad salesman in the hallways, those connected to education cried out for recognition that U.S. schools have done better than critics say.

Their views reflect a crisis of confidence in American schools. It has them running scared, tarred with feathers they feel are undeserved.

This was not just rhetoric, but a deep, gut feeling that they must speak up before it is too late and free, open broad public education in this country is destroyed.

Village idiot mentality

Strong words? Theirs were stronger.

Paul Salmon, AASA executive director: "It's the village idiot mentality. People say the schools are poor so often, they (administrators) begin to believe it." Once-passive conservative critics have taken over, he said, and are so vocal schoolmen today are resigned to being managers, not educators or curriculum leaders.

George Smith, San Diego, National School Boards Assn. president: "Public education has not failed. I'm sick and tired of everybody telling us to be accountable." The schools are the most accountable public body, he said. "No wonder the public rates us almost as low as they do Congress." Colleges are doing well, too. "All of them are not taking remedial courses.

National PTA president Carol Kimmel, noting an AASA resolution on confidence in the schools, said, "We plead with you to actively promote and support PTAs. Don't go home and give the PTA lip service. We have the materials, desire and stamina. Public education is what has made America

Top priority

Commissioner-designate Ernest Boyer: "The time has come to speak out aggressively for education. It's time to reaffirm that American schools and colleges are, in fact, the driving engine of this democracy and that education has been, and must always be, a top priority.

Frank Dick, Toledo, Ohio, superintednent and AASA president, on isolated, unrealistic critics: "It would appear that those individuals, groups and agencies are often motivated to make decisions which have little to do with improving the opportunities of the learners.

"Schools are better than they were 10, 20 or 50 years ago. They are better than when you and I went to school, and school administrators know this. Negative thinkers, pointing to declining enrolments and increased costs, have effectively portrayed an image that schools are not efficient managers of money. BUNK!! Most corporate leaders long to produce their goods or services at a percentage increase comparable to that of the schools," he said.

DROUTH

Economy rides on weather's fickle winds

By Michael Holmes

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Across Nebraska, the questions loom Farmers ask Housewives ask Storekeepers and bankers ask

Will it rain? Will farm prices improve? Will there be money enough to go around?

The answers, regrettably are borne on the weather's fickle winds If we can answer the question of drouth we can answer the major uncertainty in an otherwise improving economy," said Dr. C. Edward Harshbarger, economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City

Russian roulette

Merv Aegerter, vice president of the First National Bank of Omaha, is even more direct We re kind of crap shooting ' Economists, farmers, merchants and others

all agree that when farmers suffer, Nebraska suffers A North Platte farmer, Bernard Pieper, likens 1977 to playing Russian roulette with five of the revolver s six chambers loaded

It may be too soon to bite the bullet, some experts say But they still advise keeping that bullet close at hand

"The state s economy at the end of 1976 was healthy - except for the agricultural sector, said Dr Donald E Pursell, director of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska

"The agricultural sector is suffering" Pursell said, from low crop prices, high produc-tion costs and drouth. "But the other sectors of the economy are healthy?

According to the bureau's research, he said, 'employment is growing in the state Unemployment should drop below 4% Construction is strong Manufacturing keeps inching up. The distributive sector shows one month's gain multiplied by another

Retail sales increase

"We ve had a slow, steady, constant increase (in retail sales) Overall, personal income will go up 'It's very difficult," Pursell concluded, "to he nessimistic about the nonagricultural sectors of Nebraska's economy

But Dr Glen Vollmar, chairman of agricultural economics at the University of Nebraska, said little in the state can be separated from agriculture

"The farm economy is very important. The impact (of drouth) upon it is quite evident now Throughout the financial community there's a lot of concern," he said

Volimar said there is hope the state will escape another drouth year "If we do have another the impact could be quite severe "

timistic all the time anyway A lot of people have hope Federal Reserve Bank economists are predicting that "1977 should turn out to be a reasonably good year - if we assume there won t to too many major problems with the drouth, 'Harshbarger said

Generally, "the financial health is in pretty good shape. There doesn't appear to be any particular problems. But on an individual farmer basis, there are some very bad situations," he

Seward banker John Cattle described the economy as "optimistic and cautiously expanding But in the event of a disastrous drouth, all bets are off "

61 new industries

Cattle noted Nebraska has seen "a general infusion of industrial development that has taken up some of the slack. We're not depending 100% upon agriculture and this has helped a

Stu Miller, assistant director of research for the state Department of Economic Development, said the impact of the drouth has so far been minimal upon new industry. The department recorded 61 new industries locating in Nebraska last vear

Other factors, too, are included in the generally good economic picture, experts say

Farm technology has improved greatly over previous drouth years. Irrigation equipment, in particular, helps greatly to increase yields and improve drouth resistance

Land prices have increased considerably, making farms worth more and more

And, as Vollmar noted, "compared to the drouths in the 1930s and mid-1950s, farmers have much more cash flow. They're able to purchase more And they have to have machinery, fuel. chemicals, seed

Vollmar also pointed to another significant contribution to the good health of the Nebraska

Nebraska not island

What goes on with the state's economy is tied to the national economy. We're not an island out here The national economy has been improving some And if the pulse of the general economy goes up, hopefully we'll continue to

But Nebraska could suffer, severely "We re getting into the second and third years of this drouth," said Bill Waldo, acting director of the Farmers Home Administration And we're seeing a domino effect "

If rain doesn't come this year, Waldo said, "the farmers who tend to tighten their belts anyway will really tighten their belts. And, we're going to lose some

A serious drouth, Harshbarger said, will cut crop production "Those who have already suffered two bad years in a row and borrowed increasing amounts of money for this year are going to be in trouble

Bank examiners may force some bankers to write off some loans Farmers may be forced to pay, to find other financing or go out of business," he said

Farm credit system

Another drouth year, Vollmar predicted, "will put many farmers in further financial stress. What will happen rests a lot with the farm credit system, banks and other financial

' It depends whether they'll let farmers go on with extensions of loans, whether they'll ride along and try to keep farmers in business," he said Vollmar also observed that "there is great concern among financial institutions that we are in a stress situation '

Kirk Jamison, president of the Production Credit Assn in Lincoln, said more dry weather likely will force many farmers to use their reserves, to dip into their net worth to stay in

The more successful farmers might decide to retire now rather than dip into that equity further," he said

"Also, another year of drouth will require the sale of capital items like land. The farmer just can't float a bond issue to raise the money to pay off his loans. And he can't keep borrowing to get out of debt?

Pursell offers an optimistic note for the future in noting that during previous drouths people left the state "That's not happening this time In fact, the population is increasing

"Can't be pessimistic"

Cattle, among others, also remains op-

'I certainly think we can weather it," he said 'There's going to be some people hurt If there s another drouth all our noses are going to

But farmers can't be pessimistic. A lot of consumers don't understand that if you don't have an optimistic farmer there's no bread on

I certainly don't want to be pessimistic. We nave the happy faculty in this country of being able to tighten our belts. That's not as easy as it used to be, but I think our farmers are capable of

By Dominick Costello Farm editor

It is desperately dry in Nebraska with no subsoil moisture and only a trace on the surface outside of the irrigated areas of the state

Legislature unlikely to pass water package this session

By Harold Simmons

You can lead the Legislature's Public Works Committee to water bills, but you can't make the senators endorse them

That became apparent this week amid growing signs that some of the much-discussed water legislation submitted this year may be held over until the 1978 session.

Several members of the Public Works Committee said they'll support Chairman Maurice Kremer's suggestion that major water bills be held in committee so a "package" of water laws can be developed for consideration next year.

More study needed

Kremer said he thinks the Legislature should act this vear on some water bills, but feels most - including those generating the most debate should be studied further.

Candidates for a one-year delay include bills on transbasin diversion of water, ownership and regulation of groundwater, expanding the definition of beneficial water use and expanding the list of priority water users, Kremer

Water bills that may need to be dealt with this year include one to merge riparian water rights into the appropriative water permit system and one to give Natural Resources Districts (NRDs) control over surface water runoff, he said.

The eight-member Public Works Committee is divided whether prompt legislative action is needed or on LB298, dealing with riparian need more study and debate. Some criticism

Sen. Jack Mills of Big Springs said the committee and other senators have been criticized for not acting quickon water problems, particularly in light of the drouth.

But the fact is that there really isn't much the Legislature can do this year that will have an immediate impact on anyone's water supply this summer, Mills

Kremer agreed, pointing out that legislation under consideration is silent on some key aspects of water problems, such as the interrelationship between surface and groundwater.

The Public Works Committee could attack the water law problem in one of two ways, Kremer said.

One would be to bring in experts to help the committee draft a comprehensive package of laws. The other might be to update the Framework Study to the State Water Plan and use it as a guide for water legislation, he

Comprehensive plan

In either event. Kremer said, Nebraska needs a comprehensive water management plan that addresses not only immediate needs, but those 25 to 40 years into the future.

Mills said he'd support delaying action on most bills, as long as action was taken on some. Action should be taken

He said one of the major complaints raised by Nebraskans - the fact so many rivers and streams were dry or low last summer - isn't addressed in pending legislation. State law allows streams and rivers to be pumped dry.

Mills wants that problem along with the interrelationship of surface and groundwater considered in a package.

Omaha Sen. Warren Swigart thinks water legislation is so important it shouldn't be "I'm not opposed to piecemeal legislation if it's headed in the right direction," he said. "I'd rather start slow and make some advances this

Merz for action

Sen. Nelson Merz of Falis City also feels the Legislature should take immediate action. "We've got to get moving," he said, "this is too critical."

Grand Island Sen. Raiph Kelly isn't certain whether he'll support a delay in major water bills. But he definitely wants water issues in separate bills, not combined into a single bill.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook said he'd support Kremer's delay proposal, but isn't overly enthusiastic about

Omaha Sen. Harold Moylan said he thinks delay of major water bills is the proper thing

Businessmen hopeful for 1977, keep eyeing weather

Despite the drouth and low prices stalking farmers, business is reported reasonably good in many Nebraska cities.

A spot check of Chamber of Commerce officials across the state showed businessmen generally satisifed with the results of 1976, hopeful for 1977, and always concerned about the Fremont: "Business has been excellent," said chamber spokesman Charles Strasburg. 'But there's no doubt we're affected by the drouth. I wouldn't want to face another year similar to the last two.

Norfolk: "We're all anxious and not just about the drouth but the whole agribusiness picture," reported William Harper, "If there's a business slowdown, it's selective. Overall, we're doing very well. Nobody's digging their graves vet, that's for sure."

Valentine: "Our farmers and ranchers sure are under a strain. But the merchants have been holding their own. We've felt a pinch but not a catastrophic decline. We're surviving out in these Sandhills," said chamber official George

North Platte: "Retail sales were up 17%. We've opened new stores. Hopefully it will continue," a spokesman reported. However, while the agribusiness trade was described as good during the first half of 1976, there was a "significant decrease" in the last half of the year.

Scottsbluff: "The drouth really hasn't affected us," said chamber manager Herschel Baird. "As long as there's water in the reservoirs we're all right. Business has been steady and we're slightly ahead of a year ago. We're looking forward to another good year.'

McCook: Businessmen in McCook "are quite concerned about the drouth," reported the chamber's Barbara Lauer, "But 1976 was a pretty good year. As far as I know business hasn't dropped that much this year."

Nebraska Votes in Congress

Washington - Votes of area members of Congress on key roll calls for the week ending March 4, 1977.

Ethics Code. By a vote of 402-22 the House of Representatives adopted a resolution imposing tough new financial restrictions on House members.

The resolution required complete financial disclosure of virtually all income, assets, and debts of members, limited to 15% of official salary the amount of money a member could earn at a job outside the Congress, banned private unofficial office accounts increased official expense allowances for members and prohibited gifts to members from lobbyists.

ents argued the ethics code was needed to prevent future abuses of power by House members and to restore public confidence in the Congress. Some apparents of the resolution said that they were voting against if to protest the rules under which the resolution had been considered, rules which prevented the House from voting on all but a few amendments to the measure. Other opponents contended that the limit on outside earned income favored rich members who have unearned income such as dividends or interest

Voting for ethics resolution: Cavanaugh (D), Smith (R),

Nuclear Aircraft Carrier. On a 161-252 vote, the House refused to continue funding for construction of a fifth nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. The vote came on an amendment that would have restored to the fiscal 1977 budget $81.6 million for further construction of the giant Opponent to the carrier argued it was too expensive and too vulnerable to Soviet missiles. Along with the Carter administration, they favored spending the more than $2 billion that the nuclear carrier would eventually cost on two smaller oil-powered carriers.

Supporters argued the carrier is a powerful, ver-satile weapon unmatched in the Soviet Navy. The advantages of speed and fuel savings of the nuclear ship, they said, would more than make up for the additional cost of its construction.

Despite a three-year drouth, some Nebraskans have serious doubts about praying for rain.

What, you may say, is so wrong about praying for rain? Surely it has been done for a long as there has been prayer. Indeed, most of the 20 Nebraskans who were asked this week if we should pray for rain, answered in effect, "Sure, why not? It can't hurt.'

But some, and among them must be counted a number of ministers, exhibited ethical unessiness about praying for rain. Mostly they were people who cared too much about prayer to use it casually or "merely to cop our bets." as one person put it.

"If the Lord thinks it's good for us, he will send it," said staunch Lutheran Martha Ulrich, who farms with her husband Walter near DeWitt. "I think it's all right to pray for rain, but just because I have faith, just because I pray, I don't think the Lord will send it any time I want him to."

'I don't expect - just because I pray for rain - it is going to rain on me," agreed the Rev. Carl Kemper, pastor of the United Church of Christ in Clay Center.

God's business

"I don't think we need to tell God his business," said one scientist. "I'm sure he knows what we need, even better than

'Doesn't asking for rain reduce prayer from a relationship between persons and their maker to a simple 'gimmee, gimmee, gimmee' demand?" asked one of the many persons who did not want to be identified.

Not at all, answered evangelical, charismatic and pentecostal Christians, among others. They pointed out the Bible tells us to pray for those things we need.

We most definitely believe in intercessory prayer," said the Rev. George Cline of the Foursquare Gospel Church. We prayed last summer. And if rain is needed this year, we will pray again."

He said more and more people are beginning to take serious II Chronicles 7:14, in which God says, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.'

Why, not when

"I think maybe we should be praying to find out why it hasn't rained," commented the Rev. Jon Ruthven of the charismatic Lincoln Christian Fellowship. The biblical perspective on history, he said, is that it is shaped in direct response to the way people do or do not respond to God.

The central issue in prayer is not getting God to do stuff for us or us to do stuff for God," he said. "Prayer is a relationship. We're his heirs in the family business - we inherit it all. And prosperity and happiness, if they come, are spinoffs from that relationship. Of course, God also calls us to all kinds of sacrifice. That's part of the family enterprise,

In this context, Rev. Ruthven believes in the effectiveness of prayer for health, good government, ordered lives - and rain.

But for others, problems persist.

Having farmed in Nebraska before he studied for the ministry. Rev. Kemper is aware there is an average annual rainfall for various areas in the state. "It is selfish to ask the Almight to shift a portion of the alloted rain from another area to ours," he said.

Neighbors keeper

"If we pray all the moisture out of the clouds as they pass over Nebraska, what will that do to our neighbors in Iowa?" another person asked.

'This isn't a selfish prayer," noted a Catholic layperson. "We're praying in our churches for everybody when we pray

"Be careful not to pray up a flood," advised one wag, noting that the situation in Ohio could be quite delicate this spring.

"What is the retail value of an inch of rain in Nebraska?" asked one of the wary interviewees. After consulting some hydrologists, it was determined one inch of rain spread uniformly over the state would total 1.34 trillion gallons. At Lincoln's large-user rate, this adds up to $56

Wear and tear

"Well, then," said the wary questioner, "could we just pray for $56 billion instead and save the wear and tear on our

One of the more irreverent souls, who prefers to leave nothing to chance, offers this Rx for rain:

O, Lord, send us and our dusty neighbors around the world, a good soaking rain of about 1½ inches over a 15-hour period, at the rate of no more than a fenth of an inch per hour, preferably at night; and repeat once a week through April 15, with the exception of three weeks appropriate with the exception of the wave apply of for spring planting; and thereafter once every two weeks until the soll-meisture deficit has been eliminated, or until the farmers wish it would stop, whichever cames first. Amen.

But all kidding aside, the most important results of prayer may be what happens to the person doing the praying, according to Kemper.

Prayer may help people "learn to use terraces, contour farming, grassed areas and trash to trap water," he said. Farmers may become more responsible in their irrigation practices and city dwellers may become more responsible in their lawn sprinkling.

"We need guidance," he concluded, "to use wisely what God gives us.

Ag land plan ready to bury

Washington --- A new concept in mutual pension fund diversification --- $50 million farmland investment scheme of two powerful financial institutions - has been all but pronounced dead.

Members of the House subcommittee of family farms and rural development have all signed the contract, and the Carter administration is expected to make the hit very soon.

And should-Ag Land Trust-I, like the fabled vampire, be able to rise again, enough lawmakers are standing by to drive a legislative stake through its beart. The proposal was advanced by Continental Illinois National Bank and Turst Co. of Chicago, the nation's seventh-largest bank, and Merrill Lynch, Hubbard Inc., the real estate-financing subsidiary of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., the nation's largest brokerage house Shorn of its complexities, the Continental-managed fund would invest $50 million from pension funds in rich farmland in the Midwest, West, Southeast and South

Role never defined

What was never made clear — it changed in the telling from the fund's inception to the congressional hearings was the role of the operators of the farms to be owned by Ag Land: would they be mere share croppers, or would they have real decision-making responsibilities with the option of buying the farms?

That, plus two other considerations, generated sufficient controversy to force Continental and Merrill Lynch officials to assure angry legislators the fund would remain dormant "until the atmosphere is considerably more friendly than at present." Both the farm panel and Carter's agriculture and treasury secretaries have promised the atmosphere will not get any friendlier.

As to be expected — but obviously not by the two financial institutions - opponents seized on the specter of massive corporate farmland grabs, the upward push in land values and the resultant demise of capital-poor family farmers in order to undermine the plan.

Hanging together

This tactic was used effectively by as diverse group of legislators as Iowans Dick Clark, Mike Blouin, Charles Grassley and Berkley Bedell, Nebraska's Virginia Smith and Charles Thone, and South Dakotans George McGovern, James Abourezk, Larry Pressler and James Abdnor, to name only a few.

Continental and Merrill Lynch perhaps - and it's an iffy "perhaps" - could have overcome those arguments had they not made a strategic blunder, one they thought would help their case but which proved to be its undoing

Ag Land is the brainchild of William B. Sayre, who prides himself on his Iowa farm roots a 600-acre family farm near Ackworth. He says his colleagues "think of me as a farmer, and I am proud to have retained that identity.

But the subcommittee members, with a snicker, saw him differently. In the rough-and-ready politics of Capitol Hill, where the condemnation of big corporations is always good for a headline and several brownie points with the folks back home, roots are of little importance.

Conners hard to con

Present occupation and positions are, especially big bank connections. And in the eyes of the panel, Sayre is not a farmer but a big banker, vice president of giant Continental. As far as they are concerned, his major responsibility as head of the bank's Trust Agricultural Properties Division is and should be to make money for the bank.

The mistake Sayre and other Continental and Merrill Lynch spokesmen made was to focus their case for the fund primarily on their interest in preserving the family farm, not on the making of money. They downplayed, almost to the point of ignoring, the financial benefits that would and could accrue to their enterprises.

It didn't wash. Politicans are too big in the conning business to be conned themselves. And they felt they were

The consensus was that the atmosphere would have been less charged with hostility had Continental and Merrill Lynch come right out and said Ag Land had as its motivation the making of money. Politicans understand that language.

Solar modular home production planned in state

Solar America Inc., an Omaha firm which manufactures solar heating and air conditioning systems, plans to build modular solar homes at the firmer Grand Island plant of Gear Manufacturing Co.

Alan Fries, Solar America president, said his firm will be among the first in the world to build such homes, marketing them from $4,000 to $5,000 under the price of a conventionally-built home. The price range is $30,000 to $50.-Fries said the Gear plant, which it is buying, will employ 80. Its first year of production, under the name American Solar Homes, is already sold out, he continued.

Standard building materials will be used in the homes, with each meeting federal and state housing codes and standards. Solar America also plans to begin building a 50,000 sq. ft. plant in Valley this spring.

Steers steady, lower

Omaha (UPI) — Cattle and calf trading on the Omaha livestock market showed no real signs of improvement last

Improved winter weather and threat of restricted -livestock movement helped ancattle prices cover most of a ...sharp opening loss. Several packers were out of the market last week with labor troubles. ...and there were reports of others cutting back operations. Marketings were cut back due to the price situation, and the winter weather at midweek added to the demand. Receipts last week at Omaha were 11,200, compared to 15,-000 the previous week and 14,-200 a year ago.

Steers and heifers closed the week steady to 25 lower Steer top for the week was

of feeder cattle and calves across the nation last week usually found reduced demand and lower prices, in keeping with a continued drab slaughter cattle price trend.

Eight river markets: Choice, 600 lb steers 36 00-38 50, with thin, framey kinds to 41 50; 600-700 lb. 35.00-38.50, some to 39 50; 700-800 lb steers 35 00-36 90, 800-900 lb 34 75-36 50: fleshy, partly fattened 900-1,000 lb 34 50-35.80, with some to slaughter, choice, some prime 305-550 lb heifers 34 00to some selected bargain hunting and other internal market factors.

Investors were encouraged, however the February unemployment rate rose only to 7.5 per cent from 7.3 per cent in January, less than most observers had anticipated.

The Dow Jones average closed at 953.46 Friday, up 20.03 from the week prior. Stock prices moved ahead as the stock market seemed relieved that unemployment figures for February were not as bad as some had feared.

East withstands Burke for Class A title

By Chuck Sinclair

Prep Sports Writer

Maybe not its finest game, but perhaps its finest moment, Lincoln East capped its season the way it should have been, with a thrilling 51-47 Class A state championship triumph over Omaha Burke before an evening session crowd of 5,891 Saturday night at the Nebraska Sports

Leading by as many as 14 points with under seven minutes remaining in the game, Burke stormed back on a tremendous performance by two year all-state selection Linda McCrea to trail by just two, 49-47, with :17 remaining.

McCrea canned six of 12 fourth quarter field goal attempts and added two free throws for 14 of her game and tournament high total of 24 points while bringing the Bulldogs back for one last shot at the title. A shot everyone figured was non-existent after East took command early in the second half.

Burke actually had the chance to tie the game on two occasions in the final seconds.

With the extreme pressure, Lowe missed the first of two shots and Burke called a time-out to map out strategy.

Lowe, considered by Burke coach Karen Peterson as one of Burke's two best shooters, missed the second attempt

Boys' meet to begin Thursday

If your eyes are weary from this weekend's first girls state high school basketball tournament in 53 years, brace yourself for the boys state tournament in Lincoln next weekend.

Although Classes A and D pairings appear official based on Sunday Journal and Star records, Classes B and C matchups will require tie-breaking procedures in a Sunday morning meeting at the Nebraska School Activities Assn. office at 216 No. 11th St

The session will determine seeds and times for all classes with the No. 1 seed playing No. 8, No. 2 against No. 7, No. 3 against No 6 and No 4 against No. 5.

Here's the projected pairings for the tournament, according to semifinal also, but Burke's Julie Raber grabbed the rebound and was tred up immediately by East's Kerry Karst

With three seconds left, the tip was controlled by East's Barb Hart and time ran out on Burke's upset chances.

"It's too bad there couldn't have been co-champions out there tonight," East coach Leona Penner commented. "It's been a long time since I've had to coach in a game with such a close ending. I've never felt fear like I felt tonight. Maybe that's because I knew just what McCrea could do."

Penner had watched McCrea make eight shots in a row during a district final win over Millard.

"McCrea didn't get any cheap shots out there tonight," Penner added. "She worked hard for every one of them." A key to East's third quarter success was when Burke's 6-1 center Janet Smith was sidelined with her fourth foul.

It was when Smith returned to the lineup in the fourth quarter that Burke really started to click. "We knew we'd be in a lot better shape

if we could get her out of there on fouls,' Penner said. "But it just didn't happen. She wasn't hurting us with her shooting, but she was getting a lot of rebounds

Despite her limited play, Smith was tied with Hart for game-high rebounding honors with 11.

"I'm always a coach who has said let's play basketball for the fans," Penner commented. "But I never meant it like

"Burke should be proud of the way they played," Penner said. "They are a fine, fine basketball team. Karen (coach Karen Peterson) has done a good job with them?

"I think now, we can finally sit back and enjoy the victory for once," Penner said "That's something we just haven't been able to do at all. Even after districts when we beat Lincoln High, we knew that state was just around the cor-

"You've just got to hand it to Burke," she added "That's really hard work what they came back to do And they did it all in the fourth quarter."

"I'm very proud of the girls for coming back like they did," Peterson said. "They did a great job We think we have an excellent ball club, the second best in the state."

"It's just a good thing for us that McCrea didn't start shooting like that sooner," Penner remarked "This was important for us. We felt that if we won tonight, we could claim the state championship for three years.

"We thought we deserved it those three years.

What did Penner do this time when Burke made the comeback? "I said my prayers," she quipped.

"God hasn't let me down yet, and I didn't expect Him to tonight either ' The pressure won't be off East next year. Penner realizes that with a 42game winning streak, the pressure will never be off until the Spartans lose. "At least we'll have a new team next year," she said. "There will still be the pressure, but the seniors don't have to put up with it anymore" Penner got outstanding play out of all her seniors. "We're going to miss all those girls," "Barb Hart has been our stabilizer all year and Joni Gray came on and did a real good job in the tournament. It's just a great feeling I love tonight."

What's Penner plan on doing for an encore now that East has accomplished everything there is to accomplish in girls basketball?

"Sleep," she said.

York triumphs again in overtime

By Randy York Prep Sports Editor

Don't get York in an overtime

"I guess that's the word," York coach Tom Sheppard said Saturday night moments after his Dukes scored a 39-38 overtime victory over Lexington for the state Class B girls basketball championship.

"That's our third overtime game in a little more than a week. We outscored Schuyler and Seward in district, 23-0, in overtime," Sheppard pointed out after York's 20th win of the season before 5,891 fans at the NU Sports Center

Lexington, bidding for its 20th win of the season without a loss, forced the showdown into overtime when alltourney guard Shari Holtmeier hit a seven-foot jump shot from the right side with two seconds remaining in regulation play

York's fate teetered on disaster when Lex commanded a 38-37 lead and assumed possession with 1:11 remaining. The Minuternaids promptly went into their delay game and chopped 47 seconds off the clock.

Then disaster struck Lex. Krys Miles was called for traveling with 24 seconds remaining. York took a timeout to plot strategy and tried to work to Rita Makovicka for a close-range shot with 10 seconds remaining.

March 6, 1977

Makovicka, however, couldn't work free in the congestion around the lane, so uard Marie Beaver shot from the top of the kev.

It rolled off the rim to the right and Makovicka speared the rebound, putting the ball back up and in with four seconds remaining to ice the most dramatic game in this year's historic state tournament

"We love overtimes," York junior Lo Cunningham said "We go all out in overtimes because we feel we can outhustle anybody and everything just seems to fall into place."

Sheppard said the Dukes' success in extra session stretches deeper than that "These girls really wanted this bad for each other, not themselves," he observed. "They are so closely knit. Everybody likes everybody else. There is no resentment on this team.

"No one competes for giory. That's the meaning of a team," he added. "This group has played all year long on emotion. They're not like machines They need their human instincts. They have to have a reason to win."

According to Sheppard, his Dukes earned the championship for their desire and hustle. "They're not the picture perfect team," be noted. "But I'm not the picture perfect coach either. We just wanted this for the community of York. "Their support has been so important to our success. York needed a good shot in the arm. The football team and the boys basketball team have struggled this year and the fans wanted something. I hope we gave it to them."

Lexington also deserves credit for its hustle and desire, according to Sheppard "We had them down," be said. but they wouldn't let up. York owned a 16-3 lead less than a minute into the second quarter and threatened to turn a third straight title game of the day into a runaway. Lex, however, wouldn't let it happen, scoring aute straight points during one stretch of the second quarter to pall within six at halftime Becky Harkiess hit four straight shots for the Minuternaids in the third quarter entering the fourth quarter That's when York decided to slow the tempo and protect its lead to reduce the deficit to only two, 38-28.

The Dukes shot only three times in the final quarter, hitting one and adding three free throws. Holtmeier's dramatic hadret to force the overtime saved her from the mistake of a turnover with only 27 seconds remaining.

She let the ball roll across the 10second line too long before picking it up York, however, gave the turnover right back on a traveling violation. Lex passed the ball around for 15 seconds before Holtmeier weaved her way inside, to pull the Minutemaids even for the first time

As much as Sheppard wanted to dwell on victory, he said he would quit celebrating after the Class A game and start to think about next year "We've got girls who want to come back next year," he said "This will make things great at York. These girls will work even harder to get here next year. We've got the type of individuals who will apply and dedicate themselves to make it happen. I just hope there's a freshman, sophomore or junior out there somewhere who saw this and wants to work hard to become a part of another one

Shickley's crowds were among the largest following at the state tournament. "Yea, and I think even the bartender made it," Wegner said, smiling. "He's generally the 'last one to leave town."

The Longhorns carried a rich basketball tradition into the tourney. The boys won state titles as recently as 1970 and 1975. Guard Kathy Anderson's brother, Bill, was the Longhorn leader and an all-

Heckman appreciates support from All-City teammates

Prep Sports Editor Doug Berka, Stan Haas, Gary Karthauser and Bob Mulvaney don't have the honor of playing in next weekend's State High School Basketball tournament

But all four plan to be there, cheering fellow all-city player Jerry Heckman and his Lincoln High teammates to an openinground upset over top-seeded Grand Island. "I really appreciate these guys' support," Heckman said

Friday night when he met with Southeast's Haas, East's Mulvaney and Northeast's Karthauser and Berka for the allcity picture.

"I guess I didn't realize until talking to them how much they're behind us," Heckman said. "That's one thing about Lincoln. They'll get behind you."

Berka admits his support for Lincoln High is selfish. "I hope they can keep it going because we've beaten them," he said. "The better Lincoln High does at state, the better Lincoln looks.'

Berka and Karthauser are repeat first team all-city selections, but both said they'd gladly trade that honor for another trip to the state tournament. "I'm happy to receive the honor, but losing out at district was a big disappointment." Karthauser said, "We knew at the beginning of the season that it was going to be tough to qualify again for state.

"We really didn't feel the added pressure of returning four starters this year," added Karthauser. "All I know is the city is always tough. It was last year. It will be next year and the year

Mulvaney felt he was bucking astronomical odds to earn allcity acclaim. What kind of odds over this time last season? "About a thousand to one," Mulvaney said.

Girls basketball

A few random observations following the first girls state high school basketball tournament in 53 years.

While most of the qualifiers left something to be desired as far as total team play was concerned, the tournament was a fine beginning.

Most rosters were dominated by sophomores and juniors. Take Class D for example. There were exactly 100 girls listed on the official program for the eight teams which made it to the Capital City playoffs. Just 17 of them are seniors.

As additional skills are developed, that kind of returning experience will produce improved play.

The grade school and junior high girls of today, realizing what lies ahead for them, will make a great deal of difference five or six years down the road.

It's a comparable situation to the girls volleyball program which has now completed five seasons of competition

The first state championship team would likely have trouble winning a single game against anybody in this year's field. The same will be true of basketball in the future.

Outstanding player needed

It was obvious that most teams managed to make it to the state tournament on the talent of one outstanding player.

'That used to be the case in Iowa," one of the Hawkeye State observers who was in Lincoln for the tournament noted. "Not any more. This year, eight of the 10 top individual scorers in the state will be watching from the stands when our state tournament starts next week. It takes a solid team, not just one or two good players. The same will be true in Nebraska in a few more years.

Better team play will heighten crowd appeal for the girls game. Higher scores and fewer errors will result.

"An Iowa team which doesn't regularly score in the 60s some average 80 -- just doesn't have a chance," the Iowa official, Bob Smiley says. Smiley, an ex-Little all-American from Ambrose College in Davenport, is now the assistant executive director of the Iowa Girls High School Athletic Union. "But, remember," he adds, "we've been playing girls basketball in Iowa for 50 years.'

Halftime scores in the teens just don't provide much excitement. Neither does sloppy play.

mitted 27 turnovers and connected on just three of 21 free throw attempts and still beat Alliance by 25 points.

But don't dispair. The future is bright.

Why were the officials of the Iowa girls association so interested in Nebraska's first tournament? They had a different person over here every day.

One reason may well be the legal case currently before the courts in Tennessee. Iowa, like Tennessee and many other states, plays girls basketball by the half-court rules with six-girl

Suit filed

Somebody in Tennessee filed suit, claiming the girls were being discriminated against. Since college teams play the fivegirl, full court game, they claim a girl playing by the "girls" rules is less likely to receive a scholarship.

"If and when such a suit is filed in Iowa," one of the Hawkeye observers admitted, "we don't want to be accused of never having watch the five-girl game for comparison purposes Next week we'll have observers at the Illinois tournament (Where the full court game is also played.)'

Hopefully, this "equality" thing won't be carried to ridiculous ends. If high school athletics is ruled to be a "right" of the student and not a "privilege," a coach won't be able to cut his squad and could conceivably be forced to play each member of the squad an equal amount of time.

That kind of interference from the courts isn't needed.

SAN JUAN, P.R (AP) - "It took me the first set to get used to the wind," said Jimmy Connors Saturday after he successfully defended his Heavyweight Tennis Championship title against Ilie Nastase of Romania.

Connors won the winnertake-all $250,000 match after dropping the first set 4-6, and then coming back strong to take the next three, 6-3, 7-5, "I got my timing in the first set and that was it," he said. said.

Asked why he won this one after losing four out of the last five previous head-on matches with the Romanian, Connors said "Maybe I just waited for this one.'

Nastase, sitting dejectedly near the champion, said "I just got tired. I was very, very tired. It's tough with both the sun and the wind. "I have a touch game and the wind definitely hurt it," he He also blamed the hard synthetic court for his loss "Tve only played on that type of surface about three or four times in my life." Nastase said.

Connors, apparently not bothered by a knee injury suffered in Toronto two weeks ago, got stronger as the match progressed under sunny skies with temperatures in the 80s and wind gusts at times up to 20 to 30 miles per hour.

By winning, Connors managed some revenge against a player who had beaten him four of the last five times they had met. Nastase holds a 15-6 edge over Connors lifetime.

Connors broke the match open in the crucial third set by breaking Nastase's service twice. The first break came in the fourth game to give Connors a 3-1 lead, then he broke through again in the eighth game for a 5-2 lead and held his own service the rest of the way for the set.

Connors first won the "Heavyweight" title against Rod Laver of Australia. He successfully defended it against Australian John Newcombe and Spain's Manuel Orantes.

By Mark Gordon Staff Sports Writer

Omaha - It's now a waiting game for Marquette basketball coach Al McGuire and Creighton coach Tom Apke. But there's no question who is in the better position.

"I'm pleased with the way we played. There's no doubt we're an NCAA cut of cloth," beamed McQuire after his Warriors convincingly stopped Creighton, 72-60, here Saturday afternoon at Omaha Civic Auditorium.

"Notre Dame and us are now both 20-6 and we beat them (78-69)," he continued, "I've been fighting the NCAA through the years, but we definitely want the NCAA bid.

The bids for the NCAA postseason tournament will be announced at 2 p.m. Sunday Bids for New York City's National Invitational Tournament will be announced an hour later.

Creighton, however, probably must be considered a better bet for the NIT than the NCAA.

'I'm kind of pessimistic about the NCAA, but there's always a chance," said Apke after losing his first home game this season after 12

"We have to wait and see, but I'm going to be in my office tomorrow in case the phone rings," he said. "They (NIT) didn't make any promises. The kids would love to go (to a tournament). If we get an invitation, we'll accept."

Creighton officials have been eyeing the possibility of hosting an NIT regional game here Tuesday night If Creighton were to receive an NIT bid, it probably would be involved in that game.

For the first time, the NIT is having regional qualifications to determine the final eight teams for the Madison Square Garden event.

Marquette, meanwhile, in the last of McGuire's 13 years at the Milwaukee School, is almost a certainty to earn a post-season tournament invitation. It will be the 11th straight vear the Warriors have earned a post-season trip.

The Warriors, undoubtedly, convinced many tourney selectors with their domination before a roaring standingroom-only throng of 10,380 and a regional television audience. Marquette, leading only by 38-34 at halftime, turned a 54-46 lead with 10:02 to go into a 62-46 cushion with 7:02 to go as Creighton went scoreless for 4:21. It was no contest thereafter as Marquette's rebounding and height advantage wore down the smaller, quicker Bluejays. "We came out and played well. We did just what we have have good talent and discipline Maybe we have more talent, but coach McGuire's teams are always so disciplined. They play the way he wants them to play." Marquette dominated the rebounds (36-26), fired a superb 33 of 58 field goal attempts for 56.8 per cent (compared to Creighton's subpar 26 of 61 for 42.6 per cent) and held the Blueiavs to their lowest offensive output in a 21-6 season.

In losing his third straight game, Apke noted the Bluejays did everything right, except basketball wouldn't go in

Ps., Player, school

"We handled the ball pretty well and got pretty good shots from our kids who were in good position. But the ball wouldn't go in," he said. "I kept turning to our assistant coaches and asking what do we have to do"

He termed Marquette's physical advantage as a key factor in the game. "If we can't hit our open shots, then it magnifies their size advantage

Still, Creighton's season may not be over. The Bluejays have already announced a news conference, open to the public. Sunday afternoon

Chances are, Apke will be planning for another game.

Nebraska-bound Kindig enjoys team championship Now, Kindig is caught up in the preseason ratings

By Chuck Sindair

Prep Sports Writer With all the talented individuals who have walked the halls of Hastings St. Cecilia, it's easy to underestimate the importance of team unity.

Nancy Kindig, perhaps the greatest of all St. Cecilia athletes, doesn't.

If it weren't for that ultraimportant team unity, Kindig probably wouldn't have shared în St. Čecilia's Class C girls state basketball championship Saturday.

If not for that unity, Kindig wouldn't have played basketball at all. She didn't feel she was good enough.

'At first, I was kind of afraid that I might break an ankle or something, and there goes track," said Kindig, who won the pentathlon in the USA-USSR juniors track meet in Lincoln two summers ago. But really, I just didn't figure I could play with the rest of these girls.

Kindig, like most of her teammates, had never competed in organized busketball before this senson.

But the team unity that carried St. Cecilia's girls track team to five straight Class C titles and the past two grand championships won out and Kindig reported to practice

"I went out because everyone clae was going out," Kindig said simply. "I figured if I worked out for track instead. I'd be the only one rung while everyone else was playing basketball

Double winners Rick Cotton, Mike Ulmer and Doug Prewett paced the Doane track team to record setting win in the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference indoor track championships Saturday at Nebraska Wesleyan's Knight Fleldhouse.

Cotton, a junior from Gering, who became the first Nebraskan to clear 16-feet in the pole vault earlier this season, actually won the vent on his first vault of 15-feet. three straight outdoor conference titles.

The Plainsmen, paced by double winner Larry Bell, who captured both the one and two mile runs, also gained victories in five other events while Doane took top honors in the nine other events.

Bell set a new conference record in the mile with a time of 4:12.9, after taking the lead with two laps to go. Tim Edwards, who placed second. set a new Doane school record with a time of 4:14.

While only two conference marks fell and one was tied, the athletes groke 11 Knight Fieldhouse records.

NWU's Scott Howe won the long-jump with a leap of 23-11/2 and teammate Jim Glen took top honors with the triple jump with a mark of 46-1032. Bill Dietrick of Wesleyan broke his own fieldhouse record in the shot put with a toss of 50-101/2 and Doug Caulkins topped the old fieldhouse mark in the 300yard dash with a winning time

We did better than I expected," said Doane coach Fred Beile. "Considering Cotton hasn't worked out all week due to the muscle pull and none of our triple jumpers were healthy we did pretty well."

Midland, Hastings, Dana and Concordia combined to score 28 points.

The villain

By Randy York

Some relish the role of villain. But Kearney High School principal Harold McClure is not Peter Lorre or Sidney Greenstreet. He'd just as soon play another part.

McClure says he realizes Kearney is the villain to Lincoln schools in the new, expanded Trans-Nebraska Conference setup, causing Lincoln to show interest in the Metro. He knows his school is the root of some scheduling problems, particularly in football.

'We're getting blamed,'' he says, "but we find ourselves in the position right now of trying to accommodate everybody but ourselves. Certain things have to happen for this whole thing to

McClure and other school administrators and coaches won't go on record, but they know it might be necessary to dissolve the Big 10 Conference to ensure the future of the new Trans-Nebraska

At a Big 10 school, that's a touchy subject, especially considering the league is deeply steeped in tradition and prosperi-

Nevertheless, according to McClure, something has to give because a school such as Kearney cannot pretend to serve both conferences without hurting one of them.

McCook projected for Class B

Complicating the problem is the projection that McCook will join Alliance next year as Class B members of the Big 10.

"It's a complex problem," McClure says, adding that "in my frank opinion, it's always going to be a mess unless . . ." The Kearney principal's voice trailed off. He said the difference in competitive athletic philosophy isn't just between Lincoln and Kearney.

'We're split on the issue within our own school system,' McClure offers. "There is concern how well we will compete in a Trans-Nebraska league. It's a concern of mine, too. Hastings got caught in a full Trans-Nebraska schedule and it hurt them.

"In basketball," he says, "there's no worry. Football is another story. There's the physical factor. Lincoln schools can beat you up to the point where two or three players are knocked out for the next game.

'If you play all four Lincoln schools, add it up. It can get old in a hurry. Lincoln schools are bigger and they can afford more specializing. We can't. Most of our kids have to play both offense and defense. We can't play all four Lincoln schools."

Only two Lincoln schools

Lincoln understands Kearney's plight and appreciates the problem. Therefore, Capital City ahtletic directors have asked that Kearney play only two Lincoln schools in football each fall. McClure said Kearney agreed to that. But when the Bearcats did not schedule any Lincoln teams for the 1977 season. Kearney got tagged as the villain.

"I know Lincoln Southeast thought we should drop McCook and pick them up immediately when we heard McCook was dropping to Class B," McClure notes.

I tried last December to get a commitment from the Big 10 whether we'd fold or not, but I didn't get one," he says. "We're hung up right now. We're going to keep our relationship with McCook as long as the Big 10 is still in existence."

McClure realizes having Class B Holdrege on next fall's schedule is a source of criticism with Trans-Nebraska coaches and athletic directors. He sees the likely end to that rivalry, even though it generates Kearney's biggest gate receipts in

Problems can be worked out

"It'll be hard to give up Holdrege," McClure says, "but we want to do our part to show our sincerity to the new league. Personally, I hope we can work something out with two Lincoln schools for football.

"I still think this league can work, even if there are problems for next year. We plan to cooperate, but other schools are going to have to make a commitment, too," he adds. This has to be more than a football conference and that's where the emphasis seems to be right now. I had high hopes for the Trans-Nebraska when it started and I still do. It's just going to require some give and take . . . from everyone.'

Hudson gets pin victory

WINDSLOR LOCKS, Conn. (AP) - Top-seeded Tommy Hudson of Akron, Ohio defeated Mark Roth of New York 256-215 Saturday in the championship game of an $80,-000 professional bowling tour-

The victory, Hudson's fourth in six years on the Professional Bowlers Association tour, was worth $10,000 and enabled the 29-year-old right-hander to move into third place on this year's official money list with $27,606. In the title game, Hudson trailed 49-37 in the second frame before getting four straight strikes to take a 146-127 lead in the sixth frame. After getting a spare in the seventh, Hudson struck out to insure the victory. Roth received $6,000 for his secondplace finish.

The four-match nationallytelevised championship round began with fifth-seeded Jim Stefanich of Joliet, Ill. beating fourth-seeded Wayne Webb of Rehoboth Mass. 265-185.

Stefanich then lost 226-245 to third-seeded Roth, who finished with six straight

Roth's next match was against second-seeded Steve Jones of Independence, Mo., and Roth won 245-224 as Jones opened in the 10th.

Jones won $4,000. Stefanich $3,300 and Webb $2,800.

It was Hudson's first victory this year. He previously finished third in a $90,000 event in Grand Prairie, Tex. and second in a $100,000 tourney in St.

Vanquished McCrea heaps praise on her conquerors

By Randy York

Prep Sports Editor She stood in the southwest corner of the Sports Center on the one-year-old hardwood court

She was a lonely figure actually, since her coach and teammates had already headed for the lockerroom after Omaha Burke s 51-47 loss to Lincoln East Saturday night in the girls Class A basketball finals

Linda McCrea stood there. sweat rolling down her forehead, but definitely no tears in her eyes. The 5-8 Omaha Burke senior, who will become a three-time Sunday Journal and Star all-stater next week, had nothing to be ashamed of

She had just scored 24 points. an all-class state tournament record, against what most people already are calling a dynas-

McCrea stood there, clapping her hands together solidly in appreciation for each East player introduced at mid-court for presentation of championship medals

"I wanted to win this game in the worst way, 'McCrea said, "I'm sad, but I'm happy Not for myself, but for Burke High School We ve heard how Omaha couldn't keep the pace against a Lincoln team

Tonight," she said, "we kept the pace and I'm proud to have been a part of the history We proved we can stick with a Lincoln team in a championship situation. That meant a lot to me and everyone else '

McCrea wanted Burke's share of the credit for making the first state tournament championship in 53 years so exciting But she also wanted East to receive the lion s share

"They've earned every bit of recognition they ve received she said shortly after her 14point fourth quarter came so close to snapping East's 41game winning streak

'Think of the pressure East has had," McCrea pointed out "Everyone wanted a chunk of their hide, but they wouldn't let anyone have it That's handling pressure That's why they deserve to win "

For Ann Heermann and Barb Hart, original starters when East launched its dynasty two years ago Saturday night's arrival seemed like an eterni-

I ve been waiting three years for this. Hart said We didn't know what to expect from Burke since we hadn't played them. We knew they d be tough though

"Last night was the peak game in our season, 'Hart said of a semifinal win over Lincoln High "We kept hearing how we couldn't beat Lincoln High a third time. We wanted this more than anything, but we had to have last night before this could happen

Hart scored 12 points and snarred 11 rebounds to earn all-tournament recognition Heermann also gained that distinction following her 16-point performance in the cham pionship game

I have nothing profound to sav Heerman offered wanting to emotionalize more than interview I just felt all along we were ready for this I thought we were ready two years ago But getting one chance is better than getting

Hart recalled that two years ago, her sister, Susan and East all-stater Jan Crouch "wanted a state tournament in the worst way But they were deprived of that chance We feel fortunate to have this experience?

Neither Hart nor Heermann have thought about their futures in basketball

"I would hate to think this was my last competitive game Heermann said

'I m sure this won't hit me until sometime next week, so I haven t even thought about that " Hart said, adding "but I would like to try to play somewhere ıf I can make the team

East coach Leona Penner gives her team instructions.

State champs-media combine

The four girls state basketball champions will vouch that it pays to know people for the media - especially folks from The Journal Star Printing Co

Lincoln East, York, Hastings St Cecilia and Shickley, all crowned state champions Saturday, had a member from the media as their ambassador Three of the ambassador's work for the Journal-Star Printing ambassador The program is a goodwill gesture that is sponsored by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce It has been a part of the boys state tournament for years The ambassadors serve as "gofers" for the teams They will go for any item or service the participants might need, like towels, water, food hotel reservations help of any

Three of the ambassadors, Bill Dunn, Joe Connelly and Bert Anderson work for the Journal Star Printing Co All three had a winner in the state tournament

Dunn, a staff artist, hosted St Cecilia, while Connelly and Anderson, both members of the advertising department, hosted York and Lincoln East respectively

While the fourth champion did not have an ambassador from the paper they had a man from the Fourth Estate Chuck Stevens, sports director for KLMS radio, served as the Longhorns ambassador

Connelly and Dunn snapped personnel losing steaks In the eight years associated with the boys tournament neither had a team make it past the first

Kansas ends Huskers' season with 61-58 tournament defeat NU coach Joe Cipriano's team's play. "We missed a

Husker basketball team ended loss to Kansas in the first round of the Big 8 post season tournament at Lawrence.

The Huskers had several opnoncumities to win the contest in which they led throughout the first half but missed free throws proved costly in determining the game's outcome. Brian Banks, the Husker's 6sophomore guard, missed 4 of 5 first half free throws including the first of a clutch one- and-one situation right before the half that allowed the Jayhawks to tie up the contest 31-31 at halftime. Banks had a 69.1 free throw percentage going into the contest.

We had our chances," said. Cipriano speaking of the baskethall crown one-and-one chance there at its season Feb. 26 with a 61-58—the end. Then we lost the ball on our delay game. The Huskers led the ball game 49-44 with 8:47 left in the contest. The lead was whittled down to two points 56-54 with 4:33 left and the Huskers went into a delay game.

KU deflected the ball and Herb Nobles, a 6-7 senior forward recovered the ball. From then on the Jayhawks had control.

Nebraska ended their season with a 15-14 record.

Cipriano said he was proud of the team's performance this

Migration outlook

Spring waterfowl migration is under way through Nebraska Centries stand your stations

The annual spring outlook is keeping just about everyone on their toes. The Nebraska Game and Parks Commission is eyeing the possibility of another fowl cholera outbreak at Sacramento-Wilcox

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service annually calls for public assistance in the spotting of endangered whooping cranes Thousands of bird watchers turn out to witness the marvel of the Sandhills cranes

It is also a time for the migration of song birds back to their summer haunts. Bird watchers and banders will be in operation

The fowl cholera possibility is the biggest concern of all, however Another outbreak could be devastating, coupled with the lack of water available for staging areas Some 35,000 ducks and geese died two years ago from the disease

Minnesota's at it again

A caller this week asked if Minnesota put a ban on fish locators. The answer is no, but the legislature in that state is trying again Fish locators as such, are okay It's the graph locators which are causing the furry in the popular fishing resort state Some light-headed legislator up there thinks the graph locator would wipe out entire fish populations. Good anglers could use the graphs to chart fish and catch every single one Folks it don't work that way' Proof of the puddin' occurred in Nebraska just last fall. Lindy Tackle fishing pro Gary Roach with graph locator in boat, sat atop a school of very large striped bass. He didn't catch one. Not even a bite These graphs are great pieces of fishing ingenuity because they can even tell an experienced angler what fish he's sitting on, but they don't catch the fish for him

Dave Gaitley of the Minnesota Tourism Dept says the graph ban bill is out of legislative committee but still needs to pass the entire legislature to be law. And, he notes, the same bill was defeated two years ago by the full house

lowa law changes

While on the subject of out-of-state laws, Iowa is considering a few bills to generate money for wildlife

Three bills before the Iowa legislature would create $1 million for the state's shelterbelt program on an annual basis. establish a $3 wildlife habitat stamp similar to Nebraska's $7 50 stamp and permit landowners a tax credit for development of permanent soil and water conservation projects

Passage of this type of legislation could increase the quantity of suitable wildlife habitat in this state," said Iowa Conservation Commission director Fred Priewert The sponsors of these bills recognize that the key to wildlife abundance is

More states are convincing their legislatures and their people of the importance of that key word in wildlife management,

Adjustment needs for boat trailers

When you take delivery of a new boat and trailer, the dealer will adjust the trailer's supports to fit the hull But since the rollers are rubber. after a few trips over the highway they may settle slightly under the boat's weight

For this reason, experts suggest that you check over vour trailer at that time By finding and correcting any changes that have taken place in the way the trailer supports boat's bottom from taking on distortions that could affect its performance and handling

Take a Teflon spatula or other thin but stiff tool, and push its tip between the hull and each of the rollers to test the amount of pressure at each point Loosen roller adjusting nuts and move them slightly up or down as needed to obtain fairly uniform pressure

Look at the rollers and bunks under the transom They should offer support directly under the transom to transfer the motor's weight to the supports without strain on the hull's bottom If necessary reposition the boat forward or backward on the trailer to achieve this

With a pair of wrenches, go over the whole trailer testing each bolt and nut for tightness

When just one is loose, it tends to put more load on the one next to it, which is then more apt to come loose, starting a chain reaction

Study the vertical supports under the rearmost roller and the back ends of the bunks If they project below the level of the trailer's frame, they may dig into the ground or contact the pavement when the trailer is tilted for launching and hauling out. This may make it hard to move the trailer slight-: with the car to facilitate th operation So, cut these projections off and thereby save yourself from a possible hangup during launching

Holmes, Oak lakes suffer without water

Outdoor Editor

There's a joke going around for the dry weather sense of

Seems three men die. One is from North Dakota One is from South Dakota And one is from Nebraska All three wish to be cremated

Well, into the incinerater goes the North Dakotan One hour at full heat and he's ashes In goes the South Dakotan Two hours at full heat and he's ashes. In goes the Nebraskan Three hours later the corpse sits up, mops his sweaty brow and says. 'Another hot spell like this and it's gonna ruin the corn '

Thank heavens for a sense of humor But the dry weather is testing the sense of humor of Luncoln Parks and Recreation Dept Director Don Smith Holmes Lake is drying up and Oak Lake is dying off and that's no joke

"If we get another summer like we had last summer, we'll be in real trouble for water recreation," Smith said "You might as well forget sailing at Holmes Lake Our swimming beaches, as the water recedes, leaves us with mud beaches instead of sand We have to keep filling in with sand And Oak Lake's fishing is gone out

Smith's woes are directed at low water Holmes is down nearly nine feet from normal pool level, leaving mud bars and islands all over the lake Siltation has long been a problem in the flood control lake and that has also contributed to the filling in of the

It's ruining sailing." said Smith of the silt islands and low water "Canoeing is probably still going to be okay but nothing like it used to be From the standpoint of boating and the boating concessions we have with Dave Hutchison at Holmes Lake Marina, it's pretty serious out there

Oak Lake, the city's small fishing lakes along Neb 180 to the north of the city, is a shallow reservoir even in good years The city pumps water into the lake to maintain a recreational fishery, but the heat and water trouble has hit here as well

We've talked with the Game and Parks Commission and they told us we've had almost a total kill," Smith said of the winter fish die-off 'What we have left are stunted fish and deformed fish Not much for fishing

Smith is now searching for answers to his problems A study to put wells at Holmes for pumping water into the lake proved too costly But there is hope elsewhere

"We're in the process of working up a letter to the U S Corps of Engineers to see if they can do something," Smith said He said a corps project could possibly provide some dredging to deepen the lake or find something else to improve the troubled area

Holmes was constructed by the corps as a flood control project with recreation a secondary benefit Although its recreational benefits are now suffering, it is still functional as a flood control reseraround the nation The project would have provided funding to deepen Oak Lake to improve its water quality for a better fishery "Game and Parks worked out a program to restock Oak Lake with quality game fish if we could deepen the lake,' Smith said But the federal grant was denied We understand they are possibly going to come out with another public works program, this time with $4 billion," Smith said Priority, hopefully, is to be given to projects submitted under the first program, according to Smith

In the meantime. Oak lake is no longer being pumped

"If the project money comes through, we'll want the lake dry so we can begin work immediately," said Smith If it doesn't come through, the city lake will be left high and dry. like the water recreation from Lincoln's two city lakes if we suffer through another summer like 1976

Holmes Lake on South 70th St. is just one of the Salt Valley lake suffering from dry spells. Down some nine feet from normal pool. Holmes summer sailors will have to contend with a mud bar now exposed across most of the lake.

Troubles deeper than snow for ski resorts

By Harvey Duck

(c) Chicago Daily News Steamboat Springs, Colo — Trouble is piled deeper than snow over the US recreational ski industry Drought in the West turned this season into a disaster

The outlook for seasons to come is too many skiers crowded onto too few hills.

"I won t be surprised to see the day come - perhaps as soon as five years - when lift tickets will sell for $25 and an hour-long lift line be common, even during off hours," said Hugh Killebrew, owneroperator of the Heavenly Valley (Calif ) ski resort The lack of adequate snow bases through the first three months of the season prompted many skiers to cancel reservations, causing a 40 to 60 per cent drop in business at almost every area west of the Mississippi The bare and rocky slopes resulted in the latest openings ever at many Some, after opening on a limited basis, were forced to close temporarily when the thin bases were wiped out by unseasonably warm weather Six Colorado areas, including Steamboat Springs, Telluride and Crested Butte, were shut down at various times. Seven of the 13 Utah areas could not operate

But the snow shortage is a short-term problem What really worries the ski operators are constant clashes with environmentalists and a myriad of governmental agencies Among obstacles stifling growth, they claim, are -Governmental restrictions

-Red tape

-Economic uncertainties -Bureaucratic bungling

"If these obstacles are not resolved," cautioned Glen Paulk, president of the Steamboat Springs complex, "It is likely that the days of major new development have ended The next five years will be critical Ski areas must expand to keep pace with the growing skier population " added Killebrew and everything is stacked against us

Most major ski areas are constructed on land leased from the US Forest Service and their operations are subject to keen scrutiny during initial development as well as later expansion Paulk argues that increased emphasis on environmental protection in recent years has ment often offsets the beneficial intent

'It is absolutely unbelievable the procedures that must be followed and the paperwork that must be filed when even a minor expansion is contemplated," Paulk said The process has become so involved that whenever an area begins to think about an addition, it must plan four or five years ahead "I firmly believe that intelligent supervision of the outdoors is good and necessary "But, when you must proceed through dozens of local, state and federal agencies to receive permission for construction and where you have a situation where just one minor objection can delay or scrub a program, you're in trouble The immediate Steamboat of two additional chairlifts and other expansion at the conclusion of the current season Before approval was obtained by management (the LTV Corporation owns the resort), it was necessary to receive permission from the following

Steamboat Springs Town Council local plan commission, Routt County Plan Commission, town, county and state environmental protection agencies, Colorado Land Use Commission, Colorado Division of Wildlife, State Water Control Board, US Forest Service, plus assorted interested groups

An Economic Impact Study (EIS) must first be prepared "It is the one item that causes the most headaches." Paulk said "Anyone can object at any of the hearings that must be held

' People become emotional An objection may arise over the placement of a lift tower Then everything grinds to a halt while you try to appease the objector if one slight alteration is made in the EIS to mollify the protestor, you've got to go back to each of the agencies that had already

Such delays, he explained; boost costs and with an inflationary economy could result in a refinancing of the development Adequate ski resort financing is difficult to obtain, even under the best of economic conditions given their approval "

Killebrew has carried on a running feud with Forest Service personnel and turns livid when recalling past confrontations

"This season proves that I've been forced to do some stupid things," he charged

Facing the top-seeded team with the longest winning streak in the history of the NAIA in the opening round of the national tournament Monday night at 7 pm might intimidate some basketball teams but not Hastings, according to coach Lynn Farrell

The Hastings Broncos, 25-4 with championships in the NIAC and in the NAIA District 11 playoffs this season, face 35-0 Newberry College of South Carolina in a nationally televised opening round game in the 32-team meet in Kansas City's Kemper Arena

The tourney berth, the third in five years for Hastings, offers the Broncos almost the same challenge they faced in their last two trips to Kansas City In 1974 Hastings upset second-seeded Northern Michigan and in 1975 the Broncos, after winning in the first round, took fourth-seeded Kentucky into a overtime game before losing by two points "We have a lot of experience facing strong teams and pressure games this year and last and all of our players know the situation we face in this tournament." said Farrell "A lot of teams would be dismayed at having to face the top-seeded team with a long win string, but I'm confident we re up for the challenge " Farrell cited the experience his team gained playing on the west coast the past two seasons and facing such highly touted teams as the Athletes in Action and Pepperdine AOf course getting past Doane in our conference and Kearney in the NAIA playoffs are big games for us too "said

Farrell The game will be telecast in Lincoln on cable channel 4, in Hastings on channel 13 on the

You'll never regret planting shade tree

 Contact local nurserymen. to move large trees while the trees are dormant.

 Prune spring flowering shrubs after they flower. Prepare seedbeds as soon as the soil is tillable.

 Perennials need fertilizer for a good flower display. Prune fruit trees before buds break dormancy.

By Brent Hoadley County agent: horticulture

Everyone would like to have a shade tree that is disease resistant, drouth hardy, that withstands cold, is insect free and a rapid grower. There isn't such a tree, but you can come a lot closer to perfection by providing young trees with lots of TLC (tender loving care). Spring is the ideal time to plant a shade tree. Shade trees are one of the most important ingredients in your landscape. A good shade tree can reduce the roof temperature on your house 20 to 30 degrees during the summer. When the tree drops its leaves in the fall, the

DINING TWO CAR GARAGE 234 . 209 LIVING RM FLOOR PLAN BED RM-2 BED ROOM 147.120

The living room and the dining room adjoin in an open L-shape. An attractive family room is just off the fover. It has light front and rear and is designed in an open arrangement with the kitchen, with a breakfast bar between the two.

Both the dining room and family rooms have sliding glass doors which lead to a covered rear porch. A double window from the kitchen also overlooks this proch, where a small storage closet is located.

One of the highlights of the entertaining area is the twoway fireplace, which is viewable from both the family room and living room. Equally attractive from either side, this fireplace becomes an extended brick wall in the family room reaching up to enclose one return wall of the kitchen well.

A mudroom area is located behind the family room, which includes the laundry, a lavatory, closet and entrance to the rear porch, garage and basement, if included. A furnace room located behind the one-car garage would be relocated to the basement in that version. With a two-car garage, a large storage area is provided, with direct access

Gentleman

County Sheriff's Deputy B.G. Munn was browsing in the men's wear section of a downtown department store Friday when he noticed a lady coming toward him. He did the gentlemanly thing and stepped out of her way. Munn, 53, didn't notice the hammer of his police revolver was caught in a hanger. When he moved back across the aisle to continue browsing, the hammer was released and he was shot in the hip.

He was treated at a local hospital and released.

The bedroom wing includes four bedrooms (or three and the alternate uses mentioned before) and two full baths. The master bedroom has a walk-in closet and private bath with stail shower and three windows for light and crossventilation

If the fourth bedroom were to be used as a library or study, it could have a door acess directly from the living room. This is indicated as an option on the working drawings available from the architect, as are the basement and twocar garage alternates.

Course offered for beginning beekeepers

Because of the interest in bee culture, a beginning beekeepers short course will be conducted by the University of Nebraska on April 12, 14, 21 and 23. All sessions will be at the Town Hall in Gretna, starting at 7 p.m.

The short course will involve nine hours of meetings plus a tour to an apiary in the Gretna

Material covered in the short course will include information on: Honey Bee Biology and Behavior; The Bee and The Flower; Cost of Selection of Equipment; Economics of Beekeeping; Value of Honey Production and Pollination; Spring Management; Over Winter Colonies; Hives and Swarms; Installing Packages of Bees; Working with the Queen; Summer Management; Techniques in Examining the Colony; Honey Production; Fall Management; Bee Diseases and Pests and the Nebraska Bee Law.

When forsythia blooms, it's spring

most miserable winter within the memory of most living

Spring is awaited with an eagerness seldom experienced. This means that the bloom from the shrubs that flower in early spring will have an immense psychological impact on most people.

That's why every property should have one or more forsythia flowering almond or quince.

Forsythia is the real harbinger of spring. We may have a few cold spells after it blooms, but winter usually has spent its real force before this shrub flowers.

Forsythia is, strangely, a member of the olive family. It was named after William Forsyth, the king's gardener at Kensington Gardens, a suburb of London. Some researchers think forsythia has grown in Ireland for thousands of years, but it was first recognized by ornamental horticulturists in the late 1700s. Said in another way, it is about the same age as the United States of America.

If boughs of forsythia are cut in late winter, put into a vase of water and placed in a sunny location in the home, they will before it can be seen outside.

The common name for forsythia is golden bells, and if you'll study the plant, you'll see that each bloom does indeed have the form of a bell.

Spring Glory is the more common type of forsythia, but in recent years Lynwood Gold has become more popular simply because its bloom is larger and develops a deeper, richer color.

For the gardener who has plenty of room to work, Sieboldii forsythia is an intriguing plant. It can be trained against a bare wall and will grow to heights of 20 or more feet. Its limbs naturally drape to the ground and have been known to root in the earth wherever they touch.

Arnold's Dwarf forsythia seldom grows higher than two feet and is an excellent plant material to use on large banks that would otherwise erode. One word of caution: it is not a prolific bloomer.

Flowering almond is the daintiest and most delicate of the spring blooming shrubs. It belongs to the same plant family as plum, peach, apricot and cherry.

In fact, if you would like to quickly burst into bloom, create an array of spring color whole neighborhood, plant an ornamental flowering peach tree in your yard and then surround its base with three or more flowering almond bushes. The result is pure magic. For strange and sometimes complicated reasons, a few worthwhile plants are overlooked year after year. One such plant is prunus triloba, a lowering almond tree. It remains small and is an excellent choice for a courtyard or patio.

For gourmets, quince, the third spring flowering shrub, is a must. From its apple is made a jam and fell that are truly distinctive. The jell adds a flavor to lamb chops and mutton that no other condiment favorities of Britishers, quince tends to follow these people wherever they go.

Peach trees and quince bushes have a very strange relationship. Where peaches will grow, quince will grow. Where peaches will not grow, quince will not grow. Nobody knows why.

Coopers live, breathe basketball's joys, heartbreaks

After scores and scores of high school basketball games, Delores and Don Cooper still feel the tensions of being fans.

"Now don't get trapped back there, Coop," Coach Jerry Schmutte advises, as he goes over some plays at Norris High.

Stories By Betty Stevens Photos By Dave Kennedy

Final gun. They lost. Heart break? Sure. Pride? You bet.

Delores Cooper, face flushed, close to tears, managed a smile. "Too bad. He played a good game." She was talking about her and Don Cooper's son, Steve, a guard for the Norris High School Titans. Steve, a senior at Norris High, was the Titan's leading scorer for the 1976-77 season. He scored 17 of the first 19 points against Fairbury Tuesday night in what turned out to be Steve's final high school basketsince Steve was in the 7th grade.

You get used to the noise at basketball games, Delores says. She makes her own contribution. "Way to go, you guys" and "work it around," or "Shoot it, Steve."

ball game.

She holds a pen and tally card. Anytime, she can tell you a player's field goals, free throws, fouls and Husband Don is quiet - almost shy. He played basketball for Adams in 1950, but he insists he wasn't any good.

He says he never gets nervous, but he has a habit that gives him away. When Norris drops behind, he strokes his moustache with thumb and forefinger.

With 5:55 minutes left in the close game against Crete, the Titans' arch rivals, Don is asked if Norris is going to win. "They're ahead," he says matter-of-factly.

They are. The score is 45-40. But 25 seconds of play later the score is Delores releases great cheekfuls of air as an attempted tension breaker. "I can't believe it," she mumbles aloud to herself.

Steve is fouled and at the free throw line. Dad is asked if Steve, his son, is nervous. "Probably not," Don says.

With a final score of 53-49, Delores breaks for the court, hugging friends, touching Steve. "It was a good game. We won. And I'm pooped!"

You can believe that.

Don goes to the showers with the team. What does he say to them? "Not much. What's there to say?" You can believe that, too.

It's been a long day for the Coopers, but it's not over yet. The Coopers got to Taylor gym at Nebraska Wesleyan University before the doors opened so they'd get a seat as close to the team as possible. That meant they had neither time nor interest in dinner.

So, after the 10 p.m. win Monday, the Coopers and other Titan fans stop for dinner on the way home.

Titans had a 17-6 season. They play hard, with pride, and always as a

Under Coach Jerry Schmutte, the

Steve, 18, captained the Titans in the Class B-1 District tournament. They knocked off Syracuse Feb. 25 and Crete on Monday. In their final game of the playoffs Tuesday they lost to Fairbury 55-43.

That final gun marked the 90th or 100th time Don and Delores have seen the Titans play. Nobody's kept track, but they've never missed one

When the Coopers finally arrive back at their farm home southeast of Firth, there's work to be done.

Delores, a media aide at Norris Elementary School, still has laundry to do. As long as the team is winning, they plan to wear the same clothes to every game.

"We're not superstitious or anything," she says, "but the coach does the same thing.

Do they like Coach Schmutte? Nope, love him," Delores says.

She finishes her laundry at 1:10 a.m. She's back up to dry it at 5:30 a.m. Breakfast on game days is always orange juice, scrambled eggs, bacon and toast.

Steve has chicken noodle soup, crackers, fruit and a candy bar for lunch. Right after school he has a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, and after the game, "Anything we can put our hands on," Steve says.

Extra-curricular activities, like basketball, are suppose to come second to school work. That means that basketball players and student fans still have to go to school - even on tournament days. But Steve admits his mind is on the Tuesday night game.

'We've always wanted to play Fairbury," he says.

Words go limp in trying to describe the effort Steve gives a game. The noise keeps him from hearing Schmutte's calls so he watches the bench for signals. He keeps his eye on the clock, on his teammates, on the opponents, on the ball. He sweats profusely. He never quits, and be never forgets that he's part of a team.

Mom thinks about Steve when he was five years old and had a collapsed lung. Eight weeks of complete bed rest restored his health. but for a long time nobody would have believed he would ever have been capable of this kind of strenuous physical effort.

Does that effort concern her? "I wouldn't want him out there loafin'!" Delores says.

Basketball is a family affair for the Coopers. Grandma Cooper from Adams will be 77 in April. She went to most of the games. Sister Bev is a starter on the Norris girls varsity. basketball team. When Steve played, she was a part of the spirit Older sister Robin Bauma and husband Terry attended games, too. Robin is expecting her first child anyday. If Norris had won that game with Fairbury and gone to the state tournament, she hoped her baby would wait to be born until after the tournament was all over. "I'd rather have gone to state first,"

The Coopers had the couch and team to their home for dinner when practice first started last fall. They had disact with them Tuesday night after their final game of the season. "But don't single us out," Don said. "This is a community thing. We're just like everybody in this community.

But the coach knows when Don Cooper fails to show up for a game itwill be the first match after Don's

The thing about a final gun is this: It really isn't final — it's just the end of that one particular game.

Coach Schmutte and the Titans will be back. They're probably drafting plays for next season right now. in spite of Steve's graduation, the Coopers will be back. "They always give you a good game," Don said. And Steve? He won't be back at Norris, but you can bet the courts have not left the last of the fast pure of Steve's basketball supakers.

When Pearl Kauble was a girl growing up in Iowa, ministers , wives didn't work Not for money, anyway Their role was to stay home and help their husbands.

Now a minister's wife herself, Mrs Kauble works full-time at Miller and Paine. And few members at Southminister United Methodist Church, where her husband the Rev. Norman Kauble serves, question her right to work.

Darlene Hamilton remembers a time from an early parish when church members felt free to walk in the parsonage unannounced and help themselves to milk or coffee.

Now she and her husband, the Rev Harold Hamilton of First Lutheran Church, own their own home several miles away from their church. Deeply involved in her own career, Mrs. Hamilton's book, "Resources of Creative Teaching in Early Childhood Education," Harcourt, Brace and Jovanovich) was published recently.

Today a minister's wife may be raising children, managing a shop, doing social work, teaching, pastoring her own church. delivering mail, freelance writing or doing volunteer community ser-

Role Change

What she almost certainly is not doing is acting as half of a team the unpaid half.

No longer does she feel obliged to as individuals. I should have an idengo to every meeting of every church tity of my own ' Trained as a teacher, Mrs. Burton said she is liberated enough to choose volunteer work as a reading tutor over a paid postion. Her husband, the Rev Henry Burton, is rec-

Not typical

None of those interviewed considered themselves typical ministers' wives "I don't think there really is a typical one," said Laura Burton. "I think we're as different as any other group of tor of Holy Trinity Episcopal

"I might come the closest to it," acknowledged Virginia Hustad, a full-time wife and mother. Yet she said her husband, the Rev. Wesley Hustad of First Baptist Church, made it clear to each of his churches that "you're hiring me, not my wife"

Pat Chitwood said she noticed a difference in attitude between the small-town congregation and the city congregation her husband has served When the Rev. Robert Chitwood became minister of Capitol City Christian Church, the family felt "a real freedom," she said. "Not that we do anything differently but we are really ourselves And it is marvelous"

Pat chooses to work from 9 a.m to 3:30 p.m. as a secretary at First Baptist Church "to keep up my skills and to be available to my children after school."

The women estimated that the number of ministers' wives who work could be as high as 50%. Many work because ministers' salaries are not as high as their community

In spite of the sea change in society's attitude toward women, the wives still felt an undertow pulling them back toward an outdated stereotype.

"I do think people kind of expect us to be something we're not," said Pearl Kauble, "like we're really more educated and religious than anybody else.'

Personal ideal

Virginia Hustad said she noticed people all have different ideas of what a minister's wife should be and "if she doesn't quite measure up to their personal ideal, she is less than she should be."

"I feel that people expect minister's children to be ideal as well," added Mrs. Chitwood. "I would say they expect a lot from the minister's wife. Maybe this is not all

Most agreed a minister's wife hould be at least as committed as he most committed member. But aey didn't see this as a mandate to return to the old days.

Mrs. Kauble said she worked more in the church before her husband became a pastor. Mrs. Hamilton, on principle, will not accept any church office, believing it is more important "to train leadership and be a backup person."

Some people, they said, still think the ministerial couple is a package deal And all nodded yes when asked if a pastor's wife can make or break his career. "That's probably true of other professions too," remarked Mrs Burton

The women were divided over whether it's wise to have close friendships within the congregation. Some said they socialized with neighbors or other ministers' wives. Others said they had no problems socializing with members of their congregation.

To a woman, they were more concerned about the pressures their children felt as preachers' kids, than about themselves.

'Whenever I read in Ann Landers about how unhappy a woman is being the wife of a pastor," said Mrs. Hustad, "I feel like she'd be unhappy being anybody's wife because she doesn't have it all put together within herself.'

'It's possible she's living by what she thinks other people expect of her," commented Mrs. Burton, "that she's feeling she can't do something because others wouldn't want her to. They may not even care. I guess I've been fortunate that our congregations were very loving and accepting."

That love and acceptance is one of the advantages in being a minister's wife, observed Pearl Kauble. "When you go into a brand new community, if you're a minister's wife you've got a ready-made family."

Mrs. Hasebroock chosen Nebraska State Mother

Mrs. Margaret Hasebroock of West Point has been selected Nebraska State Mother for 1977. She was chosen on her qualifications as a successful mother and homemaker by the Nebraska State Mothers Committee.

Mrs. Hasebroock is the wife of State Sen. William Hasebroock. She adds this honor to a long list of awards and accomplishments.

Two Nebraska colleges have recognized her. She received the Doctor of Humane Letter degree in 1966 from Midland College in Fremont and in 1968 was presented the Distinguished Service Award for Wayne State Teachers College.

Korean village

From 1964 to 1966 she served a term as international president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, during which she directed development of Sin-Ai village in Korea. It involved donation of 50 earth-block bomes to 50 war widows in a newly created village.

Mrs. Hasebroock received the Good Neighbor Award from Ak-Sar-Ben in 1960.

She was national president of the Association of Parliamentarians. She is now national president of the National League of American Pen Women, Inc.

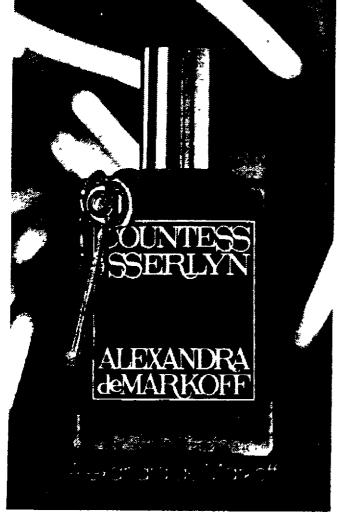

Fulfilling the requirement that the state mother be active in a religious body, Mrs. Hasebroock has served seven years on the board of trustees of the Lutheran Church of America.

Bicentennial work

She chaired the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission and conducted patriotic programs for Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge,

Mrs. Hasebroock is a former teacher and accomplished vocalist. # She's finding God under the hood

By Thomas J. Sheeran

New York (UPI) - For Sister Joan Marese, putting on overails and climbing under a car to change the oil helps to increase her faith in God.

"I feel the things I am accomplishing are a marvel. These accomplishments are a gift from God," said the 43year-old nun who teaches auto mechanics at a girls' high school. "It increases my faith in God."

Sister Joan has been tuning up autos, changing oil filters and checking noisy transmissions for six years. Before that she kept busy doing electrical work, plumbing and other light repairs in convents in New York City and Long Island.

A history graduate of St. Francis College in Brooklyn, Sister Joan splits her time between repairing autos, teaching auto mechanics to teen-age girls and making routine repairs in various convents run by her order.

'Sister Fixit'

Her long work in auto and convent repairs has earned her the name "Sister Fixit" from her fellow sisters.

Sister Joan became involved in auto repairs when her fellow sisters, aware of her role as a convent handyman, began referring their car troubles to her.

She has attended extensive auto repair classes in New York technical schools and refresher courses offered by the big auto makers for their own mechanics.

'At the Delahanty Institute (where she took more than 2,000 hours of auto repair courses) I came to meet a lot of men who wanted to talk about religion and God," she said, "and I feel I was some help.

"The religious order has been very supportive and encouraging," said Sister Joan, who does the repairs for more than 100 autos owned by her order.

State inspections

She also does the state-licensed inspections of the order's fleet of cars at her garage in Brentwood, N.Y.

Sister Joan has been a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph for 26 years. She spends part of her time teaching auto mechanics to the girls at St. Angela Hall, a girls high school in Brooklyn.

"There are a great many girls who want to get into the course. I usually wear slacks and put cardboard on the ground and get right under the car," she said.

'The girls never give a second thought to a nun teaching them auto mechanics," Sister Joan said.

Sister Joan is enthusiastic while encouraging other women to become involved in auto mechanics.

I wish women could realize they can do it. All they need is a little confidence, and the owner's manual can be very in-

Are people surprised to see a sister under the hood of a car? "No. People take it in stride."

She most enjoys doing tune-ups on conventional ignition autos but doesn't have the equipment to tune up cars with more sophisticated ignition systems.

"I have a collection of about $500 worth of tools. That might not be much for an auto mechanic but for me it's

"My vocation and work as a mechanic go together," she said. "So there are times I pray when I'm under a car."

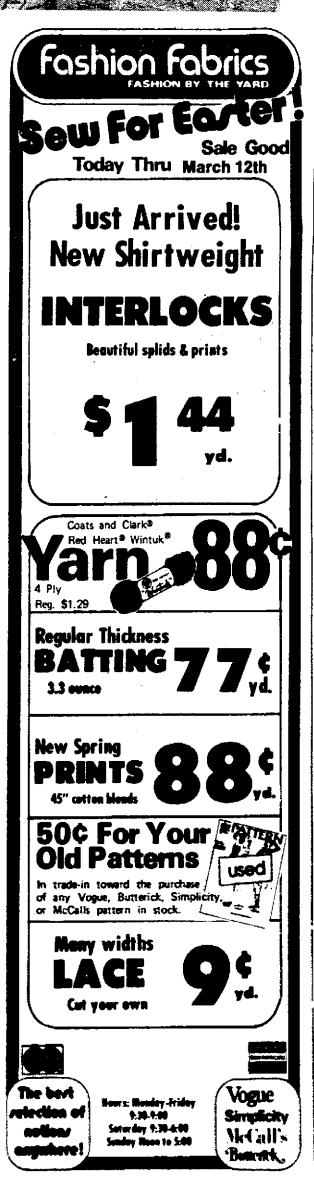

For Sister Joan Marese, putting on overalls and climbing under a car to change the oil helps increase her faith.

Begun in jest, Footprinters serious

By Franne Robertson

Law enforcement officers should not be renowned for tom-foolery but, all the same, the International Footprint Assn. (IFA) began in jest.

At the 1929 convention of the California division of the International Association for Identification, a group of officers employed as fingerprinters decided to start a fun club Jokingly, they named themselves the Footprinters

Since then, the association has grown to include officers at every level of law enforcement, as well as business and

clubs

There are 58 chapters today in Midwestern and Western states Nebraska has six active chapters

According to State Patrol Sgt. Vernon O'Neal, secretary and past-president of Capital City Chapter 44, there are almost 300 members in the Lincoln chapter

Lawmen, friends

The group's aim is to "bring together at regular meetings, law enforcement officials of all levels and all branches and the citizens of the community who are interested in the activities of those of-

Sgt O'Neill suggests that besides the opportunity to socialize and be involved in charity work, businessmen join because they are interested in the security of their homes and businesses

The Capital City chapter meets once a month with a dinner Though it is an allmale club, wives attend.

At this month's meeting, the footprinters donated a portable public address system to the Capital Association for Retarded Citizens (CARC) Aiding the mentally retarded is a major thurst of the association's charity.

Two scholarships, one academic and one vocational, sponsored by the chapter, draw a good deal of competition from Lincoln high school students, according to Sgt. O'Neal. The club tries to make the scholarships available to students who have not been awarded other scholarships.

Boys boosted

The State Patrol and the American Legion jointly sponsor Junior Lawmen, a training program for junior high school boys IFA contributes by sponsoring a boy at an approximate cost of $60.

The Footprinters also send a boy to Boys State, a model government program sponsored by the American Legion, for $80.

The Capital City chapter raises its funds in various ways. Half of the $10 annual dues stays in the chapter's kitty and some of this money is available for charity Door prizes and raffles at monthly meetings are not uncommon. A country western show at the State Fair is promoted by the club and reaps additional revenue. The weekly bingo is a financial mainstay.

A donkey softball game every August is a double charity. Tickets are sold to businessmen who donate them back to be given free to residents of the Lincoln Regional Center, Cedars Home, Youth Services System and nursing homes

Money also is raised by selling advertisements in the chapter's monthly newsletter. Sgt. O'Neal co-edits the magazine and drums up the advertising.

Check cashing

Sgt. O'Neal is the first to admit he has one personal vengeance. He objects to using his driver's license as checkcashing identification and insists on using his Footprinter membership card. The number on it is issued only once and is on file at the national level in San Francisco as well as with the local

Dear Mr. Corn:

I was dealt all four aces on two consecutive deals in my weekly rubber bridge game. Recently I read in your column that the odds on one deal were 378-1 against. What are the odds for two consecutive deals?

Long Shot, Long Beach, Calif.

Answer: Before the first four ace hand is dealt, the odds are 143640-1. After the first hand is dealt, the odds of the second one remain at 378-1.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I believe that the laws stipulate that the form of a bid is a number (one through seven) followed by a denomination (E.G. four spades). How about occa-sional extra words like, "I bid four spades" or "I'll raise to two hearts"?

Channel Chatter, Detroit

Answer: All bids should be made in the proper form as you state. Those who habitually add a word should always do so. They may be in violation, but we all have a bad habit or two. What is particularly out of order is in-consistency. The ACBL Bulletin quotes an appropriate story.

"An opening bid and an overcall was followed by 'I double. This was explained as a penalty double. The overcaller noticed that the convention card noted the pair was using negative doubles. When this was pointed out, opener replied. Double by itself is negative. I double is for penalties.

Needless to say, the pair received an on the spot discourse regarding permissible communication followed by the appropriate penalty

Dear Mr. Corn: In a duplicate game my deending opponent revoked. Had he followed suit I would have made the rest for an overtrick. His revoke caused a one trick set and the director was summoned. He ruled that I be allowed my contract but I lost my overtrick. Was this correct?

Two Time Liner, Santa Rosa, Calif.

Dear Mr. Corn: My partner went set at six clubs after this bidding:

Pass Pass Pass

Partner held this hand and I held the spade king, the worthless heart ace and the diamond jack. Was partner out of line.

♣KQJ109843

Wring Stuff, Grosse Pointe, Mach

Answer: I would say that partner was very unlucky. not only in what he found in your hand, but because the defense did not lead a heart. With a heart lead, the spade loser goes and the slam becomes easy. Better luck next time.

G.I. hospital lays off 15

Grand Island (UPI) - About 15 employes at St. Francis Hospital in Grand Island have been laid off because of a consolidation of nursing units for medical and surgical patients. Hospital Administrator

Sister Francis Ann said the hospital is trying to cut costs because of a declining occupancy rate.

She said that over the past five or six months the hospital has seen a slight decline in the number of patients. The employes laid off will be put on a "recali basis" and will be rehired if the occupancy rate rises. Sister Francis Ann said about one-half to two-thirds of the hospital's beds are in use.

The decline in occupancy reflects a national trend toward shorter hospital stays. she said.

Baby boom past; teachers face hard times job rolls actually have in- enrolment. Asked where cuts ficulty dealing with today's creased slightly.

Bottom out

St. Paul, Minn. - The nation's schools and their 2.1-million-member teacher corps are plunging into hard times.

School closings and teacher layoffs already reported in many communities are likely to become national in scope in coming years - except perhaps in the fast-growing areas of the country's Sunbelt.

And if the government's projections are correct, the situation will get progressively worse until the early 1960s.

Each year, colleges and universities graduate more qualified teachers than there are positions. By 1980, there may be as many as 239,400

fledgling teachers competing

Why this great bust in the once-booming education industry? The answer is simply the end of the great postwar baby boom — that great bulge on population charts, caused by the record birth levels of the 1947-67 period. Public school enrolment peaked at 46.1 million in 1970-71 and has been declining steadily since.

Enrolment already has dropped 1.7 million; by 1983-84

it will be down 5.8 million, or teaching jobs hasn't declined.

Through reduced teacher-pupil ratios and additional teachers

But there's every indication that the bottom is about to drop out of the market for new teachers in most states.

Minnesota Finance Commissioner Gerald Christenson notes, for example, that his state will lose 165,000 students in the next 10 years. If the current teacher-pupil ratio is held constant, 10,000 fewer teachers will be needed. But if Minnesota retains its present number of teachers, Christenson says, "it will cost $550 million more over the 10-year period than if the reduction is made. With so many other competing demands for tax money, the people of the state probably will not be willing to spend over a half billion dollars in that fashion." Indeed, if the public mood is reflected in school board actions, teacher rolls will have nowhere to go but down. Taxpayer revolts against high school levies and alleged poor or misguided teaching have caused school systems to close down for weeks or more in Oregon, Ohio and Connecticut. Voter rejection of proposed school bonds are at an all-time So far, the number of

Last April, the Gallup Poll, in a national survey, found that 55% of the people want school for the handicapped, teacher outlays to match declines in should be made, citizens suggested that "the number of teachers should be reduced." Support to decline

Christenson predicts "a dramatic decline in support for schools" in the coming years. School systems, he says, are losing the constituency that helped them expand at a dizzying rate. In those days, a high percentage of taxpaying families had a stake in the schools because their own children attended them. But now, he adds, "that scene is shifting, and parents and their maturing children are likely to become more concerned about such matters as jobs and a reasonably priced home to live

A key factor in a reasonably priced home is taxes. More than half the property taxes collected across the nation go to schools. If the public stoutly resists higher taxes, the schools will be hard pressed to escape harsh scrutiny and significant cutbacks.

The implications of mass teacher firings, or a closed market to all but a handful of new teachers, are not pleasant. "Last hired, first fired" provisions are typical of seniority rights written into most teacher union contracts. That means an increasingly aging teaching staff, including many teachers who have difstudents. It also means higher costs because senior teachers often earn twice as much as their younger counterparts. "This is the greatest threat to quality education today."

Christenson savs. "If we don't. get some young blood into the school systems, we're in trouble." He adds that "a pressure cooker is developing not just in education, but among a whole variety of young people who want a job. They want 'in' and if they are not provided with job opportunities, severe generational animosity may develop." Before these problems reach the crisis point, Christenson recommends a series of steps to cushion the blow and keep talented younger teachers entering the classrooms. Early retirement options head the list: salaries of new teachers are so much lower that savings in hiring more of them would go a long way toward covering pension costs of teachers who retire around age 55.

Other possibilities

And there are other possibilities, including parttime teaching positions, extended leaves of absence and mandatory sabbatical leaves for older teachers - all designed to open up teaching slots and let experienced teachers experiment with other careers.

Something Right Now To Save Energy

You Really Can Do

Support zoning 40th and Old Cheney Road for the multi-use center we have proposed.

Contact the mayor and city council members to express your support.

Ask others who are sincerely interested in energy conservation to do the same.

How The Multi-Use Center Will Save Energy

Multi-use of the buildings will allow them to be used 15 to 18 hours per day. This will save tremendous amounts of energy because each building will serve the uses of two, saving heating, lighting, cooling.

When fully developed the multi-use center will save shoppers in South Lincoln 37,500 miles a day because of its central location in the area of need. This is based on initial projections by traffic consultants of an average of 25,000 trips per day, and a saving of one and one-half miles per trip. This projects to more than 13 million miles per year saved.

Solar-assisted and other energy saving systems will be used for maximum energy conservation in every area of the center, including the retail, offices, apartments, single family, recreation, sports, and cultural areas.

Skylights and other natural light design features will be built into the Center to make maximum use of outside

Then came a hug from his mother, Mrs. William P. Mitchell Jr., and a bowl of ice cream.

Amin charges President Carter sought excuse to invade Uganda

Nairobi, Kenya President Idi Amin said Satur- tries. day President Jimmy Carter wanted to invade Uganda and was using a recent order barring all Americans from leaving Uganda as an excuse

Amin also said in a Radio Uganda interview that Israel will pay back in blood for its commando raid on Entebbe Airport to free Jewish hijack hostages and accused Britain of "killing Catholics in northern Ireland."

It was the third time Amin accused Washington of planning to attack Uganda since be slapped a ban on the 240member American community from leaving the country and then reversed his decision in an effort to defuse the crisis.

"President Carter wanted an excuse to invade Uganda," Radio Uganda quoted Amin as saying. It said Amin blamed Carter for precipitating the golf course near Lake Victoria

Master spy

Amin's recent actions and statements, according to sources in Kampala, came after a female master-spy allegedly penetrated an underground Christian network and uncovered a plot to assassinate Amın

A pogrom against Christians in Uganda was reported. Refugees fleeing Uganda said troops of Amin's deadly State Research Bureau were systematically killing Christians, including children, on a death list of some 7,000 my safety. Cottrell, 55, from Chadron, Neb, is one of a small group of Americans who work at liganda's Entebbe Airport and live at the Lake Victoria Hotel.

But some Americans remaining in Uganda say they have never feared for their safety.

Cottrell is the senior captain of a group of Americans working under contract for Uganda Airlines They operate a Boeing 707 and an American C130 transport plane, vital links for Uganda with the outside world.

Some of the Americans interviewed said they first learned of the ban from foreign news broadcasts or telephone calls from friends abroad.

Jim Ferguson, 47, of Fort Worth, Tex., said, "I never felt any concern whatever.'

Calorie input exceeds output

By Boyce Rensberger (c) New York Times

New York - If the entire agricultural world suddenly were to adopt American farming and food-processing methods, the energy consumed would exhaust the earth's known petroleum reserves in 13 years, a Cornell University ecologist has calculated.

The world's only hope of being able to feed everyone adequately and to keep up with expanding human numbers is to adopt food production systems unlike those in the United States, says Dr. David Pimentel, who is widely recognised as an expert on agriculture's energy demands He long has argued that the strictest dimitation on men's ability to feed himself is the energy supply. A major factor in the energy demands of American agriculture, Pimestel says, is the heavy emphasis on most production. Although American farmers

exported, but the bulk of it is fed to animals and thus is used to produce meet, milk and Pimentel estimates that grain feed yields two-thirds of the animal protein com in this country.

Measured in terms of energy consumption in production, vegetable food is a far more efficient source of energy for the human body, Pimental has

Fun and games at Rogers Tract

By Walter R. Meier Special contributor

Woods Park, a symbol and site of fun and play today, has been a recreation center longer than most Lincoln people recollect. Although its nature has changed with time, so has the nature of people.

Within memory of numerous Lincolnites, Woods Park was a cow pasture. A dense grove of walnut trees stood where the swimming pool and tennis courts now are. A tangled plum thicket nestled in a low spot west of the tennis courts. And thorny Osage orange hedgerows formed a virtually impenetrable wall around the whole property. Before it was developed into a city park, this estate was known for 80 years as the "Rogers

Activity at the Rogers Tract too, place principally at 33rd and O. This intersection was as blind as a bat. Hedgerows on the Rogers Tract curtained vision through the southwest corner. High earthen em-bankments blocked views across the southeast and northeast diagonals. And Mitchell's large two-story house blotted out prospects for the northwest quadrant.

Stop signs had not yet been invented. But then, few pleasure cars" occupied the streets at that time. Yes, in those days, automobiles really were pleasure cars. A typical owner would "roll the car out of the garage" on Sunday afternoons, wash off the dust and bird droppings and take the family for a spin. People weren't really going anyplace so they traveled quite slowly

Boys whose families didn't own cars would rush home from church, gobble dinners, dash to 33rd and O and wait for the inevitable fender-bender to happen.

Baseball was another Rogers' Tract reaction. The gentle slope at 33rd and O was ideal. Diamonds were stepped off to suit the players. Dried cow pies often served as base

On week days boys would take turns batting and running bases. Fistfights often determined who batted next. But on Sundays grownups took over the field. Men would choose up sides and have a genuine game. Boys would shag foul balls. Girls and women would cheer the team of their choice.

Baseball brings back fond memories and some not so fond. One memory is that I had to have clean clothes before playing baseball. My chore at home was operating the clothes washer.

Our washer was a wooden tub on legs. Its agitator, a disc with four pegs, resembled a cow's udder. This assembly rotated under the washer lid. It was driven by a pinion and a toothed bar which was attached to a lever. On wash days, I was attached to that lever.

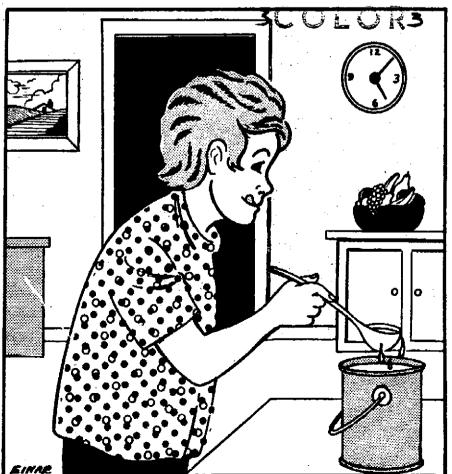

I thought that washing was less fun than playing baseball so one day I deserted the washer and high-tailed-it to the Rogers Tract. But Morn changed my mind. She switched my bare legs all the way home. Mom was equal to five child psychologists.

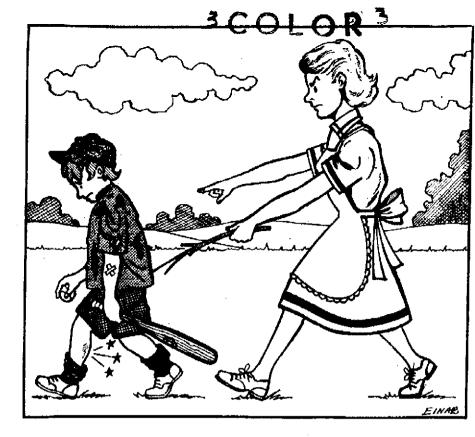

Another unfond memory was getting my finger about cut off. Some enterprising boys had taken advantage of the baseball playing and pleasure car riding habits — they had set up a curbside pop stand along O Street. And they had disposed of broken bottles in an abandoned cave. Well, I plunged headlong into that cave while shagging a foul ball one

Mrs. Ashton saw me struggling through the O Street hedge-row. I was squeezing my left wrist to stop the flow of blood. She met me as I crossed O Street, and wrapped a clean dishtowel around my hand. Then she helped me walk the block northward to my Dad telephoned Dr. Cummings at his residence. The doctor said to meet him at his office in the Terminal Building. So Dad and I walked to O Street to catch a streetcar.

Henry Schneider (a local grocer) came along. He was curious about my hand. So I showed it to him. He said he had cut meat like that in his store many times, and would save us a doctor bill by removing my little finger. Dad said he'd just let the doctor take care of

The streetcar finally arrived. Soon we landed at 10th and O, and hurried up to Dr. Cummings' eighth floor office. The doctor applied iodine and taped the finger together. using the next finger as a splint. He told dad he didn't think the piece would grow back -

Other recreation we enjoyed in the Rogers Tract was: flying kites, picking wild daisies and violets, lying on lush grass watching clouds, gathering walnuts and gooseberries in the grove and plucking plums in the thicket. Of course we did other things like tripping streetcar trollies and greasing car tracks on Wyuka hill.

But burrows through the thicket, and darkness in the grove, provided ideal places for hiding games. Then there was tree climbing to do. And digging caves or building brush hideaways were not taboo.

In fact, I cut timber and gathered long grass for a lean-to at home. And I passed a scouting merit badge by sleeping in it half that winter. The other half I spent indoors in bed with rheumatic fever. And I didn't pass 8B in school.

'Twas on the Rogers Tract that I broke a world track record. A pal and I entered the grove one day. But we stopped short when we reached its darkest depths. Hanging by its neck from a tree limb was a man's body. We made the 400 meters home in 0:50 flat.

Goodness! How could a man be so separated from God as to take his own life in that Garden of Eden? Had he become deaf to songbirds, blind to wild flowers and incognizant of peacefully grazing cows?

The cows were driven to the Rogers Tract from Young's Dairy farm. It was located in the quarter section east of 3rd, and south of O. We used to go there with gallon syrup buckets to pick up fresh, whole unhomogenized milk. Oh, but it was good! Cream that floated to the top of the bucket was especially good — providing you could snitch some at home without getting caught.

Whenever we went to the dairy we would watch men handle the cows and milk them. (And we learned all about bulls too.) The men would let us jump on the hay and climb up in the silo after pigeons.

Youngs had a pond about where 37th and

M now is. This was a place to skinny dip and smoke corn silks. Naturally, it was off limits, according to mothers.

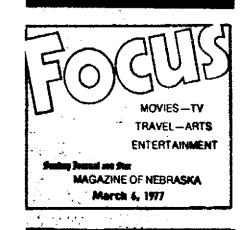

But one day we ditched our younger brothers and met at the pond. Suddenly, we spied a shikari of little brothers and their mothers trailing up Sunflower Path. We grabbed our clothing and ran a quarter mile through corn fields. Oh, what punishment! We were slashed from head to foot by saberlike corn leaves.

Another lesson learned at Young's Pond was not to swipe candy. Our iceman habitually carried a bag of it on his wagon tailgate. He would pluck a piece from the bag and pop it into his mouth, according to his own sweet will (and right before the eyes of a pack of ravenous boys.)

Well, those knavish imps plotted, and executed, a strategy for relieving the iceman of that tooth-decaying substance. Lloyd Shirey whistled when the man entered Grahams' house. I dashed from behind our hedge, grabbed the candy and ran. Other boys formed a rearguard ready to act as decoys.

We assembled near the main gate of Wyuka Cemetery. Then we barefooted-it across the hot bricks of O Street. We threaded one leg through Young's barb wire fence. Inches away, the biggest, blackest snake we ever saw slithered across Sunflower Path. We got out of there fast, ran back home, and returned the caudy to the iceman's wagon. (It had moved only one block.)

Goodness, how sorry I am for younger generations. How dependent they are on others for entertainment: tennis courts, swimming pools, organized sports, prepared food and drink, tobacco, booze and drugs. I'm so happy the Lord furnished my generation with the capriciousness of nature for recreational purposes.

"It was shocking and daring at the time (early 1930s)," said Bette. "I think it was the very first naked scene by an established actress.

"I was 23 years old when we made 'Cabin in the Cotton.' My costar was Richard Barthelmess. I'm not sure, but it may have been his last pic-

"Darryl Zanuck was the producer and insisted on doing the scene.

"The director, Mike Curtiz, was horrified. He liked the idea of a nude scene but he didn't think I was the right actress for it I wasn't exactly a glamour girl and he couldn't imagine anyone who looked like me doing a naked shot.

"Of course I wouldn't play the scene naked for anything in the world. I stood behind an opaque screen with a towel covering me. I wore some kind of tights, but I looked absolutely naked in silhouette.

'Censorship from the Hays Office was so strict I was amazed we got away with it. I was so embarrassed by the whole thing I nearly croaked.

"To bring the story up to date, five or six years ago somebody produced a film about sexy movie goddesses using old film clips. I was astounded to see myself listed among them. I died laughing

"It turned out they'd found that old scene from 'Cabin in the Cotton.' That old movie had my favorite line, which I recited in a sing-song southern accent, 'Ah'd love to kiss you, but I just washed my hair.'

Bette roared with laughter and repeated the line.

Audun Ravnan, internationally known planist who teaches at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln School of Music, will perform a free public recital of masic from the Romantic period at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Kimball Hall.

The program's main work will be "Carnaval" by Robert Schumann, described by Ravnan as one of the most popular of Schumann's larger works and definitely the most listenable. It consists of about 20 short movements depicting characters and events at a masked ball.

Also on the program will be Valses nobles et sentimena chain of waltzes tales." written by Maurice Ravel. Raynan notes that Rayel is not a composer of the Romantic period but produced these waltzes which evoke memories of Vienna and the imperial court in the time of Johann Raynan's recital will also include "Variations on a Hungarian Song" by Johannes Brahms and a group of pieces by Frederic Chopin, including "Nocturne in D-flat Major. Opus 27. No. 2." "Bar-carolle, Opus 60." and the famous "Polonaise in A-flat Major, Opus 53," often called the "Heroic."

While on a between semesters tour to Vienna and Budapest this winter, Ravnan and 12 of his piano students saw and heard a piano which had been owned by Schumann and Brahms. "Very possibly the 'Carnaval' had been composed on this piano and the Brahms 'Variations' could well have been played on it," Ravnan noted.

Ravnan was an opportunity to play a piano which had been owned by Beethoven and is now in the National Museum in Budapest. "It was a rare mo-ment for me." he said.

Nebraska in photos show at the Sheldon

The Nebraska Photo Documentary Project exhibition opnes Tuesday and con-tinues through April 3 at the Sheldon Art Gallery, 12th and R. on the University of Nebraska Campus.

Some 200 photographs have been selected for the show from the thousands taken by Lynn Dance and Robert Starck in the last year and a half.

The photographers visited every county in the state to photograph people and places during the Bicentennial year.

A smaller exhibition taken from the photos at Sheldon will circulate throughout Nebraska and also will be available to other states.

At the time of the opening of the show, a book by the same name, with the addition of 1975-1977 and "Images of Nebraska," will be available. The book is published by the University of Nebraska Press. The introduction was written by Wright Morris and Arthur Rothstein.

Art rental project expands

In less than six months a project to promote art in Nebraska is off and running.

The Nebraska Art Assn. came up with an idea that business corporations might be interested in renting works of art, rather than assembling a permanent collection. The method to provide this service was to form a committee to deal with those corporations.

Mrs. Dwight Cherry is the consultant for NAA and her summation of the project is "It is going just as fast as I can go It really has been well received. A half dozen corporations are involved so far (five in Lincoln and one in Fremont). My next out-of-Lincoln stop will be Kearney."

The project has several objectives. One is to get a wider exposure of the works in the permanent collections at the Sheldon Art Gallery.Second is to get wider exposure of the work of Nebraska area artists. At the moment this is done by working in conjunction with the Haymarket Art Gallery. Other galleries may be involved later.

"One thing we hope to accomplish is that NAA can purchase more suitable art for display in businesses," Mrs. Cherry explains. "Some pieces we have purchased for the gallery are educational — they are important pieces, and the public should know about them But they are not suitable for corporations or businesses to use in decorating. Some other pieces at the gallery are just too fragile to be placed on the rental list."

NAA Activities

In a report to member's letter, Mrs. Carl H. Rohman, NAA president, listed some of the activities the organization has accomplished this year. They are many.

The association added more than $120,000 worth of acquisitions to the collections. Also it provided a grant to the Nebraska Penal Complex for art supplies and two scholarships to All State for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Art Dept. Necessary art conservation of Sheldon's collections was done.

Some 50 volunteers assisted the Sheldon staff with clerical, cataloguing, research and sales duties

In addition the association brought to the gallery the Bradley Walker Tomlin retrospective. Bicentennial flag show and the Duane Hanson sculpture exhibitions.

Rely on memberships

Most of the activities are funded through memberships.

Haymarket Art Gallery has promoted art scholarship programs, and an artist-inresidence program, high and All State scholarships, tuition free opportunities for all ages.

Other activities include the showing and selling of works by artists in the area. Some 300 artists are represented in the gallery.

Both organizations, the Haymarket and the NAA, are working on membership

BOOKS A Genealogy for children

By Mary Somerville Chief, Young People's Services Lincoln City Libraries

Thanks to Roots, there's a resurgence of interest in nealogy and things familial. Personal and national experiences merge in the story of Kunta Kinte, Alex Haley's warrior-slave forebear, bringing history home.

Likewise, some recent children's books remind us that we are our ancestors By facing these phantoms from the past, we may better un-derstand ourselves and the meaning of America

How startling it is to read the story of William Wells Brown so soon after viewing Reets. Son of a white master and a black bondswoman. Brown wrote an autobiography that has now been adapted for young people by Lucille Schulberg Warner. From Slave to Abolitionist (Dial) narrative this highly inrecalls the bitter years of slavery: the separation of families, death and metilation, the whip. Unlike Kunta Kinte. Brown finally escaped to freedom, but even that freedom was a modified ben-dage, forcing him to flee to England, where he lectured on abolition.

Many of our ancestors are immigrants who became Americans long after the Revolution A typical example may have been Den Heary in the Wild West (Delacorte).

Swedish author Stig Ericson makes Minnesota the setting for this story in which fires, blizzards and bands of robbers like Jesse James wreak havoc with Dan's new life. Represen-tative of those who fled death and disgrace, Dan left Sweden because a legal hassle would have meant his beheading Life in the New World In vivid, first-person seemed easy compared to life migrants, since pogroms and poverty were the rule in Eastern Europe Steerage (the ocean voyage to America), was also no picnic, as explained by Milton Meltzer in Taking Root (Farrar, Straus & Giroux). Indeed, conditions on these vessels recall the gross privations of slave ships.

Meltzer's research has yielded rich quotes from the times, capsulizing the history of a people in their experiences as immigrants.

Kids searching for their own Kunta Kintes will get sound advice from the following two titles: Who Do You Think You Are? Digging for Your Family Roots (Westminster Press) by Suzanne Hilton and My tle, Brown) by David Weltz-

Weitzman's publication is more fun, but Hilton's is more systematic Complete with vital statistics addresses and information on basic research techniques, Who Do You Think You Are? might also be used by adults dabbling in genealogy

My Beckyard History Book profusely illustrated, tells young people how to tape-record grandparents' reminiscences and construct a simple family tree.

Even the most rudimentary genealogy may be too com-plicated for smaller kids In that case, All Kinds of Families (Addison Wesley) should supply the need

Family continuity is highlighted in a text by Norma Simon and pictures by Joe Lasker, making this a unique concept book for preschool and primary-age children

Beatrice's annual Orchestra Clinic is all about. Quite coincidentally, the 11th such event last month drew students from 11 Nebraska and Kansas high schools.

Of those 11 clinics, Wilcox band director Bettelee Lewis has missed only the first one. Again this year, the chance for her two top players to participate was not something to be passed up, even though it meant a round trip of 280 miles passed up, even though it meant a round trip of 280 miles. "We have by far the smallest string program in the state, with nine players, but that doesn't make our kids any less excited," said the director, herself a cellist and string bass player with the Hastings Symphony. "This is a great opportunity for them and, for that matter, any other young musicians."

The clinic, originated by Beatrice High orchestra conductor Maxine Stone, has become a tradition virtually unique outside the state's metropolitan areas. Enroling her own entire orchestra of 43, she figures the home-owners profit as much as any.

"This is a high spot of the year for many of my own students, let alone outsiders who may be making their only big music trip of the year," said the organizer. "The first year we had 75 kids, so we've really grown since the beginning."

An evening mass concert always climaxes an intensive day of "putting it all together," This year's guest conductor was Dr. William L. Jones of Minneapolis, director of the Greater Twin Cities' Youth Symphonies.

Even a director from North Platte, one of the largest schools represented, acknowledged the value of the joint experience. Tim Adsit, some 275 miles from home, brought 24 students for the three-day trip.

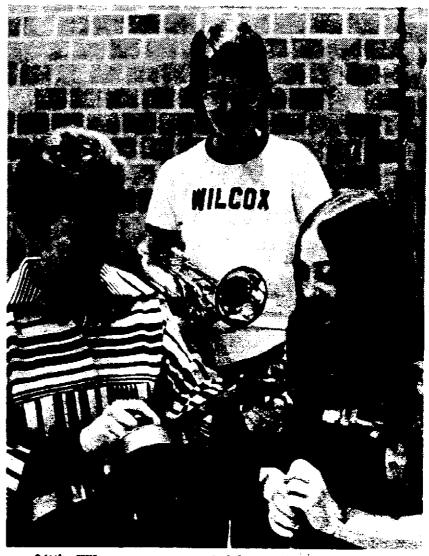

"We not only don't get to play with such large groups as this," said Adsit. "We don't even get to hear them."

All concentration is the attitude of North Platte's John Mecomber, playing string bass.

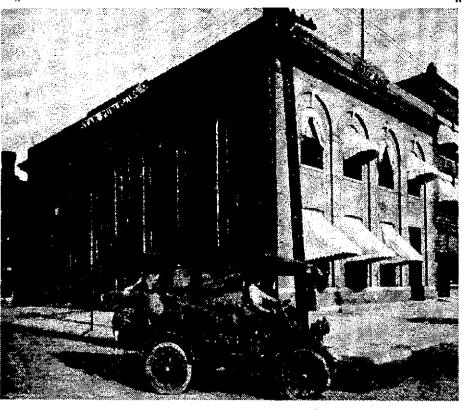

Between numbers conference brought together Beatrice students Kevin Kugler and Denise Shick, guest conductor Dr. William L. Jones and Beatrice director Maxine Stone.

Photos by a child may speak for him

By Bill Baughman (c) 1977 Chicago Sun-Times

Are young people turning to photography as a hobby at an increasing rate these days?

It would seem so. You see more teen-agers carrying sophisticated cameras. Almost every 10- or 12-year-old on vacation has an Instamatic dangling from a wrist strap. Stores are selling more darkroom equipment, film developing chemicals, enlarging paper and related supplies to the high schoolers.

At a time when verbal communication between youngsters and their parents and peers seems to be something of a problem, photography is fast becoming the "in" thing for the blue-jean set.

The parents who have heard too often, "Oh, mom and dad, you just don't understand," might give their youngster a camera and see what he turns

One of the charms of photography is that you "say it

There should be more exhibits for young people's snapshots. Visually oriented by reason of their televisionwatching, children are startlingly effective in saying things with snapshots. It's too bad that many exhibits preclude children from hanging pictures.

Give a pre-teen a camera, a simple type without any adjustments to set, and turn him loose to photograph whatever pleases him.

The self-processing, picturein-a-minute camera is also fine for the youngster beginning in

$1 Million Coin Seen in Museum

By Associated Press

Coin collectors will be interested to know that the 1907 Indian Head $20 gold pattern coin, valued at $1 million by its current owner, is on public dis-play at the Old Mint Museum in San Francisco. It is on loan to the museum for six months in celebration of the completion of the restoration of the Old Mint, a national landmark

Solution of Week's Crossword Puzzle

'Cob' is a coin cut from metal bar

111 Informat

By Leon Linheim

Coins stamped on crude irregular pieces of metal are called "cob" pieces. The word is believed to be a corruption of the Spanish phrase "cabo de barra," meaning that the piece was cut from a metal bar.

Most of the early silver and gold coins of Spanish America in the 18th and 17th centuries were cob pieces. The mint facilities were very limited. The metal was rolled into a bar and pieces were cut from it in a manner similar to the way we might slice a thick piece of liverwurst. The pieces were weighed and clipped until the proper weight was obtained. They were then stamped, which indicated official approval as to proper weight.

There was one problem: Any unscrupulous person could clip them some more after they were stamped. The eventual solution was the round coin with the ornamented edge.

Coin question

Where did the motto "E PLURIBUS UNUM," found on most United States coins, come from?

A. History tells us that this well-known motto was used as early as 1726 by English newspapers to inform readers that their publications were the work of many individuals. The mette means "out of many, one." Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, who were appointed by the Continental Congress to submit a design for the Great Seal of the United States, undoubtedly saw its use in English newspapers. There was no question but that it suggested the union of 13 columnes into one

Tom Terrific's 'Tomorrow' seems to have escaped him

'By Frank Swertlow (c) Chicago Daily News

The news from the National Broadcasting Co. is that "Tom Tomorrow" Snyder is going to do a guest shot on an upcoming McCloud show, entitled. "McCloud Meets Dracula." He will play a newscaster

Although the air date has not been announced, the NBC disclosure finally brings down the curtain on any claim Snyder has as a newsman He has become a bit player in madefor-TV-movies

Too bad! Snyder was, perhaps, the most talented reader of news to come down the airwaves in a decade. He could have been more, however.

Like Mike wallace of CBS, Snyder had a touch of show business pizzaz about him. But unlike Wallace, who spent years working to rid himself of this image, Snyder craved it. NBC's top management threw money at him, a whopping $500,000 salary. They told him he was "Tom Terrific," the fair-haired boy, the future of NBC News. He believed it, but failed to work at it. The silver platter would be handed to him, he figured

Meanwhile, the news division looked on aghast. Snyder was a menace to many of his colleagues, a glib, leisure-suited hipster who rode the airwaves like a news jockey. He had no respect for news tradition. He was the story, never mind the details. His messaniac eyes bulged out to re-enforce this They seemed to reach out at a viewer and scream: "Don't move, I'm talking.

Later, man of his news division colleagues were stunned by his on-air behavior and his off-camera remarks He wanted to be John Chancellor or Johnny Carson, they reported back. Maybe both!

and shake their heads, "Can we let him off his leash?"

Finally, the answer was a resounding, NO!

Snyder seemed potentially too difficult to be on the network news live. He would not handle conventions or space shots or special events. A slip of the lip could be embarrassing Snyder was out of his league with the Chancellors and Brinkleys and Cronkites and Reasoners. They had depth, news judgment, a solid background. He was the stuff of local news! Jokes, laugh-aminute, laugh-an-hour. Give him the "Tomorrow Show" with its assortment of guests, let him run off at the mouth. Most people are asleep anyway.

Snyder is going to take "Tomorrow" back to Hollywood from whence he came. There, he will breathe down Johnny Carson's neck. And perhaps do a few more McCloud shows

As in New York, however, Snyder probably will never make it in Hollywood either. And his next post could be handling game shows, possibly a revival of "Let's Make a Deal." Snyder is comfortable talking to people who dress up like pickles.

Western journalists have season's fourth National pm Tuesday, with a repeat at Geographic Special, "The Volga." scheduled to air, via The National Geographic The National Geographic The National Geographic Special, "The National Geographic Special ficials from Novosti, the Soviet news agency, Geographic cameras travelled aboard the Lenin, flagship of the Volga cruise fleet, to film a documentary of life along the might river that travels through the heart of Russia Although Novosti was ever present, no film was censored: it all left the Soviet Union in sealed cans to be developed in the United States.

> It is often said the Volga flows in the heart of every Russian The river is rich in Russian history, and in Russian blood. During World War II Russians fought bitterly along the river, halting the Nazi forces at Stalingrad in one of the most ferocious, costly and decisive battles of the war. Stalingrad, totally destroyed in the battle, was rebuilt and later renamed Volgograd.

> The Volga, 2,300 miles long, is the longest river in Europe With its canals, the river links four seas, the Baltic and White in the north with the Caspian and Black in the south. One must imagine the Mississippi, the Hudson and the Ohio rivers all combined into one to get an idea of the Volga's role in Russian history, culture and industrialization

Public TV showcases its best in 'Festival'

Beginning today KUON and the Nebraska ETV Network again joins with public television stations across the country in a 15-day jubilee of special programming to attract new viewers and to gain more support for public televi-sion. — "Festival "77"

Some special programs, produced in the United States and abroad, have been acquired by the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) for Festival 77.

They include music, drama. comedy, sports and documentaries on unusual subjects.

As a showcase for superior quality programs, "Festival 77" will be used to encourage support for Nebraskass for Public Television, Inc. (NPTV) and to promote greater awareness of public television in Nebraska. NPTV President Benjamin

R. Morris says, "Festival 77 is part of a major public televi-sion effort insugarated in 1975 to increase the level of nonfederal monetary support for nationwide public television. The increase is important in light of the recently enacted long-range Public Television Funding Act in which public television is required to match every $1 allocated by the federal government with $2.50 acquired from other sources.

We greatly need to increase citizen involvement in support of public television in Nebraska to guarantee growth and further development of this important resource for all Nebraskans."

Following are some of the programs for "Festival "77."

"Previn and the Pittsburgh," tonight at 7 (repeats Thursday at 11 p.m.) Second program of new con-cert series is a "Concert of Tchalkovsky and Stravinsky.

"The Epic That Never Was," Monday 9:30 p.m. Dirk Bogarde hosts documentary about a 1937 motion picture that was never finished, I, Claudius," with Alexander Korda as producer, Josef von Sternberg as director and Charles Laughton, Merle Oberon and Flora Robson as stars.

"The Volga," Tuesday 7 p.m. (Repeats Friday 9:10 p.m.). National Geographic special captures the life and history along the 2,300mile

"Bitthe Spirit," Tuesday 8:50 p.m. This is the 1945 film version of Noel Coward's stage success that has become one of the classic comedies of the contemporary theatre. A novelist (Rex Harrison) finds married life to his second wife (Constance Cummings) complicated by the appearance of his first wife's ghost (Kay Hammond). A most eccentric medium (Margaret Ratherford) starts all the trouble during a sennce.

"Scenes from a Marriage,"

Wednesday 9:05 p.m. Ingmar Bergman's six-part series, originally broadcast on Swedish television, begins. Liv Ullmann and Erland Josephson star as a couple whose 10-year marriage evolves from placid innocence to confrontation, separation, seduction, divorce and semi-reunion.

"The Men Who Marched Away: Poetry from World War Wednesday 10:65 p.m. (Repeats next Sunday at 10:30 p.m.) Darren McGavin stars with The First Poetry Quartet in this "Anyone for Tennyson?" tribute to the soldiers who wrote from the trench of World War I - a war in which over 50 prominent poets lost their lives. The poetry selections include Planders Field" by John McCrae; "I Have a Rendezvous with Denth" by Alan Seeger: "The Soldier" by Rupert Brooke; "Break of Day in the Trenches" by Isaac Rosenberg; and Siegfried Sassoon's "Aftermath."

"Glory of Their Times," Friday at 8 p.m. The men who played America's national pastime — baseball — during the first two decades of the 20th century are the subjects of this documentary. The program features rare new sreel footage and vintage still photographs of legendary players and managers as Christy Mathewson, Ty Cobb, Monus Wagner, John J. McGraw, Connie Mack, a Walter Johnson and Babe Ruth and Nebraska's Wahoo (Sam) Crawford who played with Ty Cobb from 1985-1917.

"Vienna Philiproposic New Year's Concert," Saturday 6 p.m. The music of four members of the renowned Strauss family is performed by the Vienna Philharmonic in this concert taped on New Year's Eve 1976 in Vienna. Members of the Corps de Ballet of the Vienna State Opera are also featured.

"Sanford and Son" may be filming its new season later this year without either of its stars. Redd Foxx gave notice some months ago that he wouldn't play the old junkman beyond the episodes currently filming. Now Foxx's costar, Demond Wilson, is demanding so much money that the producers may continue the comedy series without him.

Singer John Denver's special "Thank God I'm a Country Boy," features Johnny Cash, Glen Campbell, Roger Miller and Mary Kay Place.

Elinor Donahue, daughter of Robert Young and Jane Wyatt in the old "Father Knows Best" series, plays a mother in 'Police Story" episode.

Karen Valentine, who hasn't been seen much since her "Room 222" series, has been signed by NBC for a half-hour comedy show still in the development stage.

U.S. Olympic champ Bruce Jenner has been rehearsing his sports show commentaries at ABC.

Karen Black plays a lady possessed by the personality of a dead woman in "The Strange Possession of Mrs. Oliver," TV movie.

Lincoln Symphony concert on KFMO

The first of a series of delayed broadcasts of Lincoln Symphony Orchestra concerts will be heard on KFMQ today during the station's Patterns in Classics program. Host David Kappy said KFMQ's broadcasts of the concerts are made possible through cooperation of the Lincoln Symphony Assn. and with assistance from Audio Systems & Design.

During today's 6 a.m.-noon program, the Lincoln orchestra's Feb. 15 concert will be heard. With Dr. Robert Emile conducting, the orchestra will be heard performing these works: Overture to Der Freischutz, by Carl Maria von Weber; Symphony =39 in E flat K, 543, by Mozart, and Suite from the Firebird, by Stravinsky.

Other works on today's Patterns in Classics include:

Arias: Jussi Bjorling, tenor. Falla: Suite from "El Amor Brujo": Alicia de Larrocho, piano. Enesco: Sonata #3 for Violin & Plano: Rafael Druian, violin;

John Simms, piano.
Rossini: Overtures to II Turco in Italia, and La Gazza Ladra:
Cleveland Orch/Szeli.

Highway radio providing information to drivers

For years radio stations have broadcast traffic advisories during peak morning and evening travel periods. More recently motorists with citizen band installations have been able to share information with one another about accidents or the presence of police radar units.

Now, under a new federal program known as Highway Advisory Radio (HAR), the car radio makes it possible for motorists to tune in to a given frequency on the AM band (usually 530 or 1610 KHZ) and obtain up-to-the-minute reports on traffic, advice on parking facilities, warnings on fog and ice, suggested alternate routings and information about motorist services.

The driver approaching the Walt Whitman Bridge in Philadelphia, for example, learns whether a lane is blocked or what the condition of traffic is on the Schuykill Expressway, into which westbound bridge traffic feeds. Should the expressway be clogged, the motorist is advised to leave his car at a Park-and-Ride lot and take rapid transit into Philadelphia.

The Highway Administration is encouraging cities and states to apply for matching funds to place transmitters and other equipment needed to provide advisory information on heavily traveled sections of the federal-aid highway system. Two states that are doing so are Colorado and Wyoming.

As an example of a program similar to the Federal Highway Administration's HAR, motorists within a two-mile radius of Los Angeles International Airport can tune to 530 KHZ between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. daily and hear recorded reports on where to park inside the airport boundaries, where to park outside the airport when lots are full, where to return rental cars, where various airlines are located and how to get around the airport and the surrounding vicinity by public transportation. Whenever necessary, the recorded messages are interrupted with live traffic advisories.

Because the systems are designed for low-power transmission, only radios in the immediate area can pick up the broadcasts. Motorists are alerted by signs in the vicinity of an installation to tune their radios to the proper

York and done his homework, replacing John Chancellor as anchorman of the NBC Evening News, he would have been the first major TV journalist to have grown up solely on electronic news. He was not the child of newspapers or the wire-services, but of television. He did not look at a camera, be kissed it, smothered it with his presence.

There is another critical difference, too. Tom Snyder represented what is called "Blue collar news." He seems to have a rapport with the working man that no other TV newscaster has. He did not talk down to them or preach or dress like a Wall Street banker. He could have been dynamite.

He was on the same level as the rest of today's television, which is more and more "blue collar" oriented. For instance, take comedy: "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley" are about working class people. They also are the biggest hits in television. The Fonz is a mechanic. L&S work in a brewery. Most network television news is more formal and serious minded.

Tom Snyder would have been the best practicing the informal style and could have swept the airwaves. His tragedy is that he threw his future away and NBC's brass let him.

BOSS OF THE ROAD!" Here's a magnificent old-timer that could qualify as both antique and classic.

Packard introduced its first six-cylinder model in 1911 (for the 1912 season), and soon two series of sixes were offered: '48" and "38." Packard fours were eliminated in 1913. Earlier "48" sixes were illustrated as having an engine with cylinders cast in three sets of two, but the 1914 model was described as having cylinders cast in threes, as on

This mighty "48" had a one-man top, a clock, Packard-Bijur electrical lighting and starting, and a power pump for inflating tires. For luxury, this Packard was equaled only by the new 12-cylinder (V-120

"Twin Six," introduced in 1915

And what is a 1914 Packard worth these days? Well, nearly two years ago, a fully-restored specimen was advertised for $80,000, and since then the prices of most antique cars have increased.

Were antique cars ever cheap? Yes, in the 1930s, the few cars from before World War I which would still run were considered unwanted, outdated old "dogs" and could be obtained at rock-bottom bargain prices. In 1932, my older cousin could have bought a 1916 Buick coupe for SEVEN DOLLARS, and in 1952, I was able to obtain a 1929 De Soto roadster, which ran well, for only $10! And I was satisfied in 1956 to sell it for $50, though it would be worth many times that amount today.

Writer Finds Paris Europe's No. 1 City

By Jacqueline Thomas

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Nine days in Paris isn't a long time, especially for a first visit. But it can be long enough to take time out to relax, explore and fully enjoy the city that deservedly is a tourist's No. 1 European destination.

I set out on my first visit with a guidebook and a long supplemental list of places to go and things to see. Both spent most of the time in a desk drawer, consulted only occasionally. My only constant companion was a map of the city and its bus and metro routes that was in near-shreds by the time I left.

The first few nights I made a point of figuring out what I wanted to do the next day. But since I never followed my carefully mapped-out plans, I abandoned that practice in favor of deciding on an initial destination each morning as I lingered over my cup of cafe au lait. From there I progressed as the spirit moved

Because it never moved me in that direction, I never got close to the Eiffel Tower. It had always struck me as ugly, anyway, and in Paris where there were so many other things to do, a visit seemed like a colossally boring way to spend an hour or even a few

On the other hand, I found myself returning to Notre Dame twice after a brief stop during a bus tour that was part of my tour package. And although I'd always considered churches — with the possible exception of Westminster Abbey - among my least-favorite sights abroad, Notre Dame and Saint Chapelle are on the brief list of "must sees" I'd furnish to friends, on request.

Other entries on that list would include breathtakingly beautiful Versailles that restored my faith in fairy tales - especially the renovated sections, the Cluny Museum and the city itself from a boat on the Seine.

although with less enthusiasm - the Louvre, Les Invalides, the Rodin Museum and the Flea Market as places to spend some time.

But before I'd ever begin to list places to go in Paris, I'd lay down the three firm-andfast conditions.

Thou shalt pick a neighborhood and wander around it until it's comfortably familiar. Pick a small cafe and make it your own. Find out if there are other places where local residents meet. Visit the shops in the area - the butcher, the baker, the phar-macist, the florist. (And be glad you're not a Parisian housewife who lacks the convenience of an American-style supermarket or shopping center!) See it at different times — in early morning when workers are hurrying out of their homes and shops are getting deliveries, in the afternoon when children are coming home from school, in the evening when couples are out

Thou shalt not believ Parisians are unfriendly They're not. Like residents o other big cities, they're busy And being by temperamen more a New Yorker than i midwesterner, I suspect the attitude toward tourists I similar to mine here at home amusement rather than anything approaching malice Don't be afraid to courteous approach Parisians will questions despite the possible language barrier. One of m fondest memories is a conver sation with a middleager Frenchwoman in a small restaurant after I asked her i halting French to help me with the menu. It turned out she speaks fluent English. She is: member of the America: Legion's Paris Post No. 1 and devoted Fred Astaire fan!

- Thou shalt not expect the city to be cheap. A bargain like beauty - is in the eye of the beholder. And for my money, Paris is cheap at any

A Star Is Born In Air and Space

Washintong (UPI) - The Smithsonian's new National Air and Space Museum is a smash hit — a "My Fair Lady" of the Mall. No museum history ever had more visitors

Before it opened last July. officials anticipated 5 million visitors a year. The first 5 million came in the first six months - an average of more than 27,000 a day.

On one very hectic day last July, 87,000 people jammed into the huge stone and glass building just down the Mall from the Capitol.

Five times that day, the three block-long museum reached its shoulder-toshoulder capacity of 8,000. For the first time, visitors had to line up outside a Smithsonian museum to get in.

"The Friday after Thanksgiving was, like see a bunch of old airplanes?

Gangbusters in here," says deputy director Melvin B. Zisfein, a former aerospace engineer. He says Washingtonians stayed away all summer, waiting for the tourists to depart. As a result, the museum was as filled in September as it had been during the summer.

In "visitor tracking surveys," some museum visitors were followed around without their knowledge. The surveys show that the average visitor spends about two and half hours in Air and Space - a lot of time considering all the competing sights Washington offers. Surveys show, too, that old airplanes are as interesting as space flight.

"And to think that before this was built," says Zislein, "some people in Washington asked, who's going to come to

But the museum offers more. From outside, a visitor in enticed by the view through enormous windows of some of the major machines of flight from the Wright Brothers' "Kitty Hawk Flyer" to the Saturn V rocket which boosted man to the moon. These are

Inside, sophisticated methods of museum display are used to get away from a static trade-show atmosphere. A visitor gets the flavor of carrier life by walking on a steel deck and seeing a movie of planes taking off and lan-

Zisfein spent several days on the USS America to capture the right feeling. An automated pupper show recreates the first balloon flight across the English Channel, in another gallery, a visitor walks through a World War I aerial battle

The museum tells the stery of light from airmail and the Hindenburg and barnstorming through moon rocks. So far there have been no complaints that the museum is militaristic, propagandistic or sexist.

"We show the bad side, too" says Zisfein. "We have the atom bomb on display and we show what it did. We're not sugar-coating history — o vinegar-coating it either."

Travel Abroad Could Mean More insurance

Accidents do happen when traveling so check with your insurance agent when preparing for a trip at home or abroad.

With the right kind of insurance, travelers can protect themselves financially against possible hazards, from missed charter flights to lost luggage.

Most people get basic travel insurance coverage from three sources, according to the Fireman's Fund Insurance companies: health and accident policies, personal auto policies and homeowners or tenants policies.

Specialized coverages of particular interest to travelers include personal property floaters, trip accident and trip baggage insurance, special life insurance and charter flight protection.

Worldwide Plan

Accident and health insurance policies generally provide coverage anywhere in the world. Nearly all medical facilities in the United States honor domestic insurancè policies and won't require immediate payment from the patient if they can confirm that the insurance is in force.

To expedite medical claims. policyholders should carry their insurance identification card and the telephone number to call to verify coverage.

U.S. insurers will honor claims for medical expenses incurred out of the country, but the medical facilities themselves will probably require payment before the patient leaves. The policy holder then must apply to his insurance company for reim-

By Murray J. Brown, UPI bursement and should therefore save all receipts to substantiate claims.

> For travelers without medical insurance policies, there are short-term accidental injury policies that also provide a small hospital indemnity for illness, typically $30 a day. In addition trip accident policies are available for short-term coverage for accidental injuries.

Air Travelers

There also are short-term accidental death policies designed specifically for air travlers. They provide high benefits for the duration of the flight, at relatively low cost, They can be purchased at airports. Under one arrangement, through the American Express Co., and Fireman's Fund, persons buying airline tickets with their American Express card can automatically get $150,000 in accidental death insurance

For protection against lost or damaged luggage, there are short-term policies - also sold at airports - to cover a specific flight. There also are baggage" policies providing such protection from the time you leave home until you return. Airlines and other public carriers usually will reimburse travelers for lost or damaged luggage, but their limits of liability often are not high enough to cover the value of the loss.

Fireman's fund says there is some coverage, for at least $1,-000, under homeowners and tenants policies for this sort of loss. So check.

Jewelry, Furs

used to insure particularly Your hometown agent can valuable items, such as jewelry and furs, and are generally sold for stated amounts of coverage on "all risks" basis.

Another type of travelers' insurance is "charter fare protection," offered by some companies to protect the financial interests of persons who pay in advance for charter flights but are not able to make the trip because of illness or other reasons. Cancellation could mean loss of the deposit. Some companies provide coverage for the air fare only, but a few others offer protection for the entire cost, including fare and accommodations.

Check your automobile insurance policy if you are traveling by car. Financial responsibility requirements for personal injury and property damage as a result of accidents vary among the states. Many auto policies now automatically extend coverage to meet the requirements of various states - including those with no-fault insurance. But there are exceptions and short-term additional coverage may be necessary.

Canada, Mexico

Most domestic policies will protect U.S. motorists visiting

Your U.S. insurance. however, will not be recognized in Mexico. The only insurance that Mexican authorities -consider valid is that sold by Mexican companies. Short-term policies can be purchased from agents at Personal article floaters are most cities along the border.

probably make advance arrangements for you.

A word of caution: You can go to jail in Mexico if you can't prove you have valid insurance even if it was your car that was damaged and the other fellow was to blame for the accident.

Travelets using rented or borrowed cars are probably insured by their own auto policies, but car renters should give consideration to rental firms' offer of a "waiver of liability," sold usually for a dollar or two.

If you buy the option and damage the rental car, you won't have to pay the deducti-ble, which is usually about $200. On the other hand, if you don't buy the option, the firm will probably demand full payment of the deductible when the car is returned.

Sound Management Depends On Accounting

By Dr. Arthur Kraft Professor of Management, UNL SUN Faculty Consultant

Many businesses fail because they do not keep adequate records. This is especially true of small businesses. Any firm regardless of its size will not be very successful unless it maintains records of all its transactions. These transactions may include sales, cost of raw materials, salaries and fringe benefits, tax outlays, inventories, and capital expenses.

The recording, classifying, summarizing, and interpreting of this information represents the primary function of accounting Accounting methods are used to provide information on a firm's financial position at a point in time

Accounting procedures not only give meaningful information to the owners and/ or managers of a business, but they also provide information that is useful to investors, creditors, and the governments

Although the terms "accounting" and "bookkeeping" are often used simultaneously, they have different meanings Accounting is the more defined and sophisticated discipline while bookkeeping primarily focuses on clerical activities, such as recording and tabulating the information used by accountants

Accountants, on the other hand, concentrate on developing the procedures under which transactions are summarized. They also are extensively involved in the design of forms and systems for displaying the data associated with transactions. In addition, the accountants may be actively involved in the policy setting and planning activities of the company.

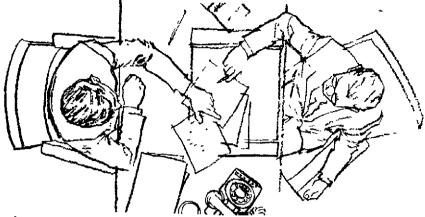

Accountants analyze information that is necessary for sound business decisions. This information, which concerns the financial condition of the firm, may be very revealing. The firm may be making unprofitable investments or undervaluing its capital equipment. In addition, the earnings may not be at a sufficient level for the firm to continue its operations or the firm may be incurring excessive costs.

Since the accountant maintains all records over an extensive number of years, the current financial status of the company could be compared with its performance in previous years Because the procedures under which these figures are gathered and summarized are standardized, valid comparisons can be made between current and past performance.

This reduces the opportunities for any illegal activities and wrongdoing on the part of the owners and/or management of the firm. To insure the quality of work and to maintain a high degree of proficiency in accounting skills, each state has established standards that a practicing accountant must meet in order to be certified as a public accountant ((PA))

While the exact requirements vary between states the person usually has completed a specified educational program in accounting along with several years of experience as a practicing accountant. The individual also must pass a comprehensive examination covering accounting and subjects related to accounting

Public accountants are used by many firms to help with tax and auditing problems. These individuals act independently since they sell their services to the firms. They perform a number of functions auditing and verifying the firming are records of the firming advising the firm on the proper methods to keep records preparing financial statements for the firm on a regular basis and advising management on the interpretation of these statements assisting the firm in budget preparation and planning, developing a sound tax program for the firm.

In addition to providing accounting services, the public accounting firms may provide management consulting services and market research services

Accountants may specialize in certain areas, such as taxes and governmental accounting. There are many different tax regulations which confront business firms while they carry out their operations. Tax accountants may be able to save firms and individuals large amounts of money because of their precise knowledge and understanding of the tax laws and regulations.

The federal, state, and local governments spend and receive vast amounts of money each year All such transactions must be identified, specified summarized, and analyzed in the same way that a business firmhandles its transactions. Thus, many accountants are hired to process the transactions of government agencies.

THREE FIELDS

In general there are three major fields of accounting. They include cost accounting, auditing, and general accounting

Cost accounting focuses on the costs associated with running a business Such costs would include wages and salaries, the cost of raw materials, cost of capital, and other miscellaneous costs Cost accounting is very helpful in managerial decision-making. One can precisely determine the cost of each unit of output and the costs of the various methods of production associated with that output. Thus a firm may compare its production costs over a period of years and also make comparisons to determine if one method of production is cheaper than another method.

Auditing concerns examing the accounts of a firm to see if they are accurate Since bookkeeping or accounting errors may have occurred during the recording and summarizing of transactions it is the function of the auditing process to examine these records to see if any errors have occurred

Auditing procedures are designed to uncover errors that are either accidental or planned Thus, there is less chance for fraud and misuse of company funds

There are two areas of auditing internal and external

When a firm's records are examined or audited by a member of the organization an internal audit is said to have occurred. A firm normally will maintain two independent sets of books or records of all transactions which are later examined in an audit. If they differ an analysis must be performed to determine the reason for the discrepancy

An external audit occurs when the books are examined by an outside firm of accountants. It is felt that an independent auditor will be totally objective when performing the ai Jit.

In addition to reviewing the records of the firm, the external auditor may present a detailed report on the firm's current accounting procedures and suggest improvements if necessary. General accounting concerns the general records of the firm. These records may include the income statement and/or balance sheet. The extent of detail in these records will vary according to the size of the firm. A larger firm needs a more complete set of records than a smaller one. These records, however, must be prepared in a form understandable to all of the executives in addition to the accountants. The records must be designed in a precise and simple manner.

BALANCE SHEETS

Accountants present their information in financial statements which may be prepared quarterly, semiannually, or annually. The balance sheet and the income statement are the most commonly used financial statements.

The balance sheet indicates the financial status of a business at a specific point in time. Thus, the balance sheet of an organization could change with each day of business. It shows the firm's assets habilities, and net worth.

Assets represent items of value possessed by the firm. These items could be property or resources in addition to cash patent rights goodwill etc. The assets of an organization may fall into several categories.

Current assets include cash and any items that may be converted into cash in a relatively short period of time (say within one year)

Inventories may be classified as current assets since they will normally be converted to cash within a future time period. Inventory consists of all business goods that are in storage or with the production process in a semi-finished state.

Fixed assets represent items which may be used by the firm for a long period of time (usually one year or more). They are not consumed in the course of a business activity cycle. Land and capital equipment are fixed assets. Most fixed assets are considered to have a relatively long life. However, they decrease in value each year as they become older.

This consumption or decrease in value of the fixed asset is called depreciation. A fixed asset such as a truck may be valued at $5,000 when purchased but may depreciate at a rate of 20 per cent or $1,000 each year. Within a two year period the truck would appear on the balance sheet as a fixed isset worth $3,000.

Investment assets are the funds invested by the firm in securities, such as stocks and bonds

Intangible assets represent items such as goodwill patents licenses and mailing lists. Goodwill is the value a firm attaches to its and income public image. It is a difficult value to deter nine. While some firms do not include goodwill on the balance sheet, others may define it as a nominal value of $1 or even several thousand or million dollars.

Liabilities are the debts owed by a firm to any one who has the legal right to collect such debts. These funds may be owed to employees, bond holders, or suppliers of goods and services. Liabilities are classified as either short or long term. Short-term liabilities usually must be paid for within a year, while long-term liabilities may exist over several years.

Net worth is the amount of investment on the part of the owners in the business Net worth is sometimes referred to as owner's equity, and it represents the difference between assets and liabilities

INCOME STATEMENTS

The income statement presents a sum mary of the changes in a firm's financial status over a specified period of time rather than at a specific point in time. The income statement may be prepared on a monthly or quarterly basis.

Whenever a change occurs in the financial status of an organization, the changes are recorded and summarized in the income statement. The statement will indicate the sources of all income received by the organization, the operating expenses incurred, the cost of all goods purchased and sold and the profit or loss situation of the organization for the period.

Ratio analysis is often used by account ants to interpret the financial data for an organization. The specific ratios may be compared over a period of time to determine if there has been a change in the financial status of the firm. In addition, the ratios of various firms may be observed to compare one firm with another.

The current ratio is the ratio of the current assets of the firm to its current liabilities. A common rule of thumb is that the current ratio should be at least 2 to 1. A firm with current assets of $841,642 and current liabilities of $412.981 would have a current ratio greater than 2 to 1. A ratio that continues to rise over a period of time would imply that the firm is becoming more financially sound.

The ratio of sales to inventory has the annual sales of the firm divided by the value of its inventories at the end of the year. This provides a picture of whether or not the firm is investing too much in inventories. It can also be used as a guide to inventory turnover. A relatively high ratio would imply fast sales turnover. A declining sales to inventory ratio could mean that the firm is heading for trouble. It could have excess inventory or sluggish sales.

The budget is a formal plan designed to show the expected income and expenditures for a business over some future time period. It is usually prepared one year in advance and is designed to serve as a schedule for future activities. Thus, a firm may better manage its financial resources.

The budget allows the firm to set goals and then develop a plan to reach those goals. A firm must have a good accounting syst, in so it may keep records of its expenditures and income.

Q. Who were the wealthiest Presidents of the U.S.A.? -Dominic Sentore, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Probably George Washington, who owned choice Virginia real estate: Theodore Roosevelt, who left an estate valued at $811,000; Woodrow Wilson, whose estate was valued at $600,000; Herbert Hoover, who left an estate valued at more than $1 million at his death in 1964; and Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose estate came to $1,085,500. Dwight Eisenhower became wealthy via his book "Crusade in Europe," oil investments managed by his friends while he was President and various gifts, John F. Kennedy was the recipient of a multimillion-dollar trust fund from his father. Lyndon Johnson, when one considers the holdings of his wife, Lady Bird, was probably the wealthiest of all U.S. Presidents. In 1943, Lady Bird bought radio station KTBC in Austin, Tex., for $17,500. Over the years, while Johnson was in government, additional radio and TV stations as well as real estate were acquired. In 1963, The Washington Post estimated the value of these holdings at $7 million, and they became worth much more. One reference book with material on the subject is "Facts About the Presidents," by Joseph N. Kane (pages 338-9).

DEAN MARTIN WITH CATHY HAWN, WHE NO. 3

Q. I have been told that Dean Martin's lawyers will not allow him to marry anyone unless he first gets the girl to sign a pre-nuptial agreement limiting her financial settlement in case of a divorce. Is this true? Did Dean Martin make his last wife, Cathy Hawn, sign such an agreement?-G.D., Los Angeles,

A. Martin's lawyers have advised him to obtain such pre-nuptial agreements. He obtained one from Cathy Hawn before their marriage, and it saved him a fortune at divorce time.

SEN. HOWARD BAKER

Q. Did Howard Baker, the Senate Minority Leader, plunge the knife in Ted Sorensen's back because Sorensen has been married three times? Isn't that the real reason Sorensen had to back away from a confirmation fight as director of the Central Intelligence Agency? Also, how much of a tax deduction was Sorensen allowed for contributing his papers to the John F. Kennedy Library?— E. F., Cambridge, Mass.

A. Senator Baker plunged no knife in Sorensen's back. Sorensen removed himself from consideration for the CIA job because he could see a controversy developing that would lead to his defeat. Questions about his character and judgment offended him. In December 1968, after receiving an advance of $200,-000 against royalties for his biography "Kennedy," Sorensen contributed his papers to the John F. Kennedy Library. He claimed a deduction of $231,923. of which $89,927 was finally allowed.

Q. I understand that Svetlana Peters, 50, daughter of Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin, lives in Southern California and has changed her name. What is her new name?—A.L., San Diego, Cal. A. Lana Peters.

Q. When Redd Foxx, the TV and nightclub comic, recently married a Korean girl 20 years his junior, he was asked in Las Vegas where he had met his 34-yearold beauty. He is supposed to have given an unprintable answer. Can you reveal it?—F.K., Henderson, Ky. A. It wasn't at all unprintable. Foxx simply said, "One day I opened my wallet and there she was." Yun Chi Chung, born in Korea but a resident of Los Angeles, is Foxx's third wife.

Q. Who is the oldest living great painter in the world today?-Bonnie Nathan, Deal, N.J.

A. Likely candidate: Marc Chagail, 90, Russian-born, naturalized French citizen whose works include the Metropolitan Opera House murals in New York City and the ceiling of the Paris Opera.

MARC CHAGALL

Q. Bob Haldeman, Richard Nixon's chief of staff, urged Nixon to give blanket pardons to everyone involved in the Watergate scandal. Why didn't Nixon, before his resignation, pardon his pals and prevent them from being convicted as felons?-C. Glenn, Newport Beach, Cal.

A. We will have to wait for Nixon's explanation, scheduled for publication in 1977. Most probably Nixon was afraid of pardoning some 20 people since it would reveal the extent of corruption and illegality in his Administration.

Q. Was the late Humphrey Bogart a wife-beater? I mean, did such actresses as Helen Menken, Mary Phillips, Mayo Methot and Lauren Bacall-who were married to Bogey—permit that sort of roughhouse? —Nellie Mae Young, Charleston, S.C.

A. Mayo Methot permitted it.

MICHAEL CAINE, DAUGHTER NATASHA, WIFE SHAKIRA

Q. Michael Caine, the actor, has an Indian wife named Shakira. They also have a child, Natasha. Does the child look more British or more Indian? Also, how old is she?-F.T., ft. Lauderdale, fla.

A. Natasha is 3, looks half-and-half.

Is the Archie Bunker belief that all welfare clients live better than working people

Not according to a coalition of 18 major private social service agencies in New York City, where researchers recently published a report on the "Myths and Realities of Welfare in New York."

The notion that welfare clients are well-off is absurd, says the report.

"The maximum monthly welfare grant in New York City for a family of four, not including rent allowance, is $258, or $14.88 per week for each family member's basic necessities.... A survey of welfare mothers in New York City in 1974 found that 56% were spending less for food than the cost of a nutritionally adequate diet; 86% of the families reported running out of food at the end of most check periods; and 41% said that their families experienced varying degrees of hunger at all times....More than 60% of the welfare clients in New York City are children under the age of 18 who do not enjoy the advantages afforded their peers in working families."

The popular misconception that all welfare recipients are lazy is widespread.

Says the report: "... only 3% of people receiving welfare are able to hold a job. Most clients are young children, mothers who try to care for them, and people with severe health problems. The few able-bodied adults who receive welfare are nearly all on the rolls because they couldn't find jobs."

Gen. Robert Close, commander of Belgium's 16th Armored Division, has been ordered to zip his lip.

The general, who recently lectured at the NATO Defense College in Rome, made the mistake of giving his honest opinion on the Soviets versus the NATO nations in war.

According to Close, it would take the Soviets and their allies about 48 hours to overrun West Germany.

Close, who was a member of the Belgian wartime resistance and spent three years in concentration camps, is the author of "Defenceless Europe." He asserts that Warsaw Pact forces could advance to the Rhine River so quickly that NATO could never retaliate with nuclear bombs, for fear of killing West German civilians.

The Indomitable is the first French nuclear sub to carry new M-20 ses-to-ground strategic ballistic missiles equipped with nuclear warheads. The M-20 missiles have a range of more than 1500 miles. The Indomitable boasts a new nuclear engine which uses highly enriched uranium and pressurized natural water and consumes less fuel than previous reactors. Its top speed is faster than 20 knots.

Bribery is commonplace throughout the world. So declares "Business International," which recently polled the managers of 55 multinational corporations.

According to these gentlemen, bribery is omnipresent in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Indonesia, the Philippines and Latin America.

Even in Western Europe and the Eastern Bloc countries allied with the Soviet Union, there are acknowledged if subtle methods of making irregular donations.

Greg-ory Peck has finished filming "MacArthur," and in time studio drumbeaters will flood the media with MacArthur copy. But one of the most intriguing ironies concerning the colorful general is how few people in Japan, residents or tourists, show any interest in the office where he ruled Japan for 5 years and 8 months as Supreme Commander for Allied Powers.

From August 1945 through April 1951, when President Truman fired him, Mac-Arthur occupied an office in the Dai-Ichi Mutual Life Insurance Building, one of the few structures in downtown Tokyo that survived U.S. air raids.

Less than a month after the Japanese surrendered in World War II, MacArthur okayed Dai-Ichi as his headquarters. He chose a 534-square-foot office on the sixth floor and had it furnished with a large rectangular wooden desk with no drawers; a large gray rug from Tientsin, China; two favorite oil paintings of yachts, and a leather swivel chair.

The office overlooked the imperial palace of Emperor Hirohito, but MacArthur declined to visit the palace. Whenever he wanted to see the emperor, he had Hirohito call upon him.

MacArthur's office is now used as a conference room for Dai-Ichi executives. Insurance salesmen and their wives are given occasional guided tours. On a wall to the left of the entrance is a small plaque which says: "This room was used as the office of the Supreme Commander for Allied Powers by General Douglas MacArthur and General Matthew B. THE LATE PRINCE WILLIAM OF GLOUCESTER

LOVE AFFAI Revealer

Prince William of Gloucester, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain, had a twoyear love affair with an attractive Hungarian divorcée in Tokyo before he was killed at age 30 in a flying accident on Aug. 28, 1972.

The London Daily Express recently named the woman as Zsuzui Starkloff but did not reveal her age or whereabouts. It did point out, however, that the affair was "traumatic for the entire British Royal Family," since it recalled the love affair between American divorcée Wallis Simpson and King Edward VIII, who abdicated the British throne in 1936.

According to The Ex-

press, Prince William met Zsuzui in 1968 when he was a second secretary at the British embassy in Tokyo. The British ambassador; Sir John Pilcher, cautioned the prince against the affair. But William and Zsuzui continued until he left Tokyo in 1970 to take over the family's 2500-acre farm in England.

William's mother, Princess Alice, invited her son's sweetheart to England and treated her well but explained that marriage was an impossibility, whereupon Zsuzui left and never saw her prince again.

A biography of Prince William, revealing the romantic details, will probably be published in this country later in the year.

Youths protest increasing unemployment. Of all jobless Americans, half are under 25; in the inner cities, where the problem is acute, masses of unemployed young are becoming discouraged and dependent or resorting to crime.

Senate Bil No. 1— Jobs for Youth

by Sen. Charles Mathias Jr. (R., Md.)

WASHINGTON, D.C. 1" used to be a code number for a bill providing a harsh revision of the U.S. criminal code. Now 5.1 identifies a new jobs and economic growth bill I introduced on the first day of this 95th Con-

America today is raising young people in the hundreds of thousands who have seldom, if ever, held a job. Almost half of the 7.8 million unemployed Americans are 24 or younger; unemployment among teenagers has been on the rise for 20 years and is running now at 20 percent.

In the inner cities, where poverty and decay persist even in the best of times, the effects of high unemployment are devastating. Among black teenagers, who are concentrated largely in the cities, unemployment has held at 25 percent or more throughout the past decade, surging in the past two years to epidemic proportions. The Bureau of Labor reports an unemployment rate of 36.1 percent for black teenagers, as against 18.7 for whites the same age. The National Urban League believes the figure for blacks exceeds 60 percent.

Unemployment among the urban young has had grave consequences for all Americans. There is no longer any doubt that chronic unemployment feeds urban crime. And nearly half of all violent crimes are committed by juveniles. Crime menaces all of us: the poor, the elderly, the shopkeeper, the suburban commuter. High crime rates drive both the black and white middle classes from the cities; recently, businesses have joined the exit to the suburbs. The cities' tax bases are melting as a result. Bankruptcy has become a clear and present danger for many cities.

Many jobless, few skills

As jobs and money leave the cities, young people flood the job market in greater and greater numbers, with fewer and fewer skills to offer. Few find work. Many give up trying. Ronald Brown of the National Urban League believes the result will be disaster. "We are creating a huge population of discouraged and permanently dependent people," he says, "with consequences we can only guess at." Those consequences are hinted at today in deteriorating city blocks, clots of restless sullen teenagers on street corners, and growing de facto

The government has not been indifferent. Two billion dollars or more are spent each year on jobs and training for young people. But the programs have had mixed success, and the crisis of unemployment among the young continues. There is growing debate, criticism, and disenchantment.

The present Congress will be wrestling with a number of bills designed to achieve the elusive dream of guaranteeing a job at a decent wage to all Americans who are willing and able to work

Rebuilding neighborhoods

S.1 would create a national youth service to employ those people between the ages of 16 and 24. Under contract with the Department of Labor, public and private organizations would hire youths from low-income families to rebuild and beautify their own neighborhoods. There is no panacea to crime and alienation, but if the deprived and troubled young people who are today fighting for survival on our city streets were paid to do productive work in their own communities, I believe our cities could begin to hope again.

Past jobs programs have often failed to train young people in skills that would serve them in future jobs. 5.1 would authorize the Secretary of Labor to pay employers who train them for permanent employment. A similar policy has been tried with success in Western Europe, Some Common Market countries pay employers $100 for every month they employ and train a young person in his first six months out of school.

More parkland projects

S.1 would also expand the Youth Conservation Corps from a summer to a year-round program. The YCC hires young people for environmental projects on state and federal lands, much like the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930's. But the program is too small and the summer job too brief to be of lasting value. 5.1 would authorize the hiring of 100,000 young people in its first year, 200,000 in its second, and 300,000 in its third. I believe my bill would roll back the horizon for young people whose lives have been confined to the asphalt world of the city. It would make dramatic and enduring improvements in our state and national park-

Most important, it would give the young truly useful work.

5.1 is innovative. But its scope is wide, and it addresses the inadequacies that marred previous jobs programs. And it involves private business in hiring and training, rather than looking solely to government. Congress must solve the problem of America's unemployed young. If it fails to do that, a great part of a generation will be consigned to lives of poverty and lawlessness. All Americans will feel the consequences.

These young men of 1930's found work in parklands under the Civilian Conservation Corps. Today's Youth Conservation Corps is similar, but is a summer program only.

hese are tough times for studio press agents here. The major studios are producing fewer films each year and what they make is cast with the same old names—Barbra Streisand, Robert Redford, Paul Newman, Steve Mc-Queen and Jack Nicholson.

Moreover, most of the studios have long abandoned the practice of signing, developing, and publicizing a contract list of young players. Thus, the press agent is frequently cornered into publicizing the story instead of the star, a more difficult job, or of trying to build up an actor or actress for one film, a short-term objective.

At 20th Century-Fox they are giving the buildup to Marie-France Pisier, a 32-year-old French actress unknown in this country. She stars in the recently finished The Other Side of Midnight, based on a best-selling novel by Sidney Sheldon which is considered required "under-the-hair-dryer" reading. It concerns a French girl who, during World War II, is seduced, impregnated, and abandoned by a dashing Errol Flynn continued

Observations

Dollars and sense. Americans are increasing their oil consumption again, but the nation's oil fields are producing 1.3 million barrels a day less than they did four years ago. The result: a growing reliance on imports. In fact, the bill for foreign oil last year came to about $160 for every man, woman, and child in the U.S. What to do? America needs a national energy policy that will encourage offshore drilling for oil and gas, the use of coal, and, to the extent it's safe and environmentally sound, the development of new nuclear generating plants. Down the road are oil shale, solar energy, and synthetic fuels. But energy policy remains the first step.

Now the good news. Most Americans agree with the need for an energy policy. In a recent Roper Organization poll of more than 2,000 people, a federal energy policy was given high priority. About 90 percent of those interviewed said the U.S. needs a "plan to conserve present energy sources and develop new energy sources so we will not be dependent on foreign countries for energy." If the people recognize the nation's needs, maybe the government won't be too far behind.

A friendly and knowledgeable human put the wandering bird on a jet for home, but the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service bumped him from the plane. It seems the law protects him from being "kidnapped" wherever he is found, even if it's the wrong place, with the wrong climate. Happily, this time the red tape was quickly cut; the owl got his plane ride after all, and presumably lived happily ever after.

type of American flyer. The girl aborts her pregnancy, uses her body to become a top film star, and eventually becomes the mistress of a fabulously wealthy Greek of the Aristotle Onassis stripe.

She spends much of her time and money searching out the flyer who seduced her. She subsequently finds him, hires him as her private pilot, humiliates him, then beds him down and tries to talk him into killing his wife.

"It is what you Americans call a soap opera," explains Marie-France Pisier, who, of course, plays Noelle, the French girl whose body movements in the film drive men wild with passion only to leave them weak, pliable, and submissive.

"I do not know how it will be received," adds Marie-France, "but I hope well, because I would like to make other films here.

"Hollywood," she says, "is like a clinic. Everyone comes here to get well, to find a career, a husband, stardom, to find something. I am one of the pais a dark-haired, green-eyed intellectual who, in addition to being a veteran French actress ("I have worked in some 20 films, including TV."), is also a nonpracticing lawyer.

"I earned my degree," she says, "at the University of Paris in six years, in between acting jobs. But it was mostly courses in international law which I took. My husband, George Kiejmanhe is the practicing lawyer in our family. He represents motion picture and record companies."

Happy anniversary?

How long has Mane-France Pisier been married?

"I am not sure," she says frankly, closing her eyes and searching her memory. "I think we lived together for three years and have been married for two, or maybe it is the other way around, I think it is the other way. Lived two, married three."

Where did she meet her husband?

"I am not too sure," she repeats. "I think it was at a premiere of a film. Yes, yes, it was-a film called La Maison des Bories."

Is she happily married?

"My husband and I"-she halts to find the correct words in English, a language she learned at the university and by listening to BBC radio programs from England---"we are understanding of each other. He has strayed maybe two or three times, and so have i. But in marriage-modern marriage --it is not so terrible. It is understanding People are weak. Sexual attractions are strong. One must live completely. Life is adventure."

Born in South Vietnam

For Marie-France Pisier, adventure began in Dalat, South Vietnam, where she was born to Paula Caucanas and George Pisier, a colonial administrator. When she was 6 her father was transferred to Noumea. New Caledonia. She was reared there along with an older sister, Evelyn Bernard, who today teaches law, and a younger brother. Jilles, who majors in mathematics at the prestigious École Polytechnique in Paris.

Her parents, who have twice been marned to and divorced from each other, returned to Paris when Marie-France was 12. "But having lived so long in the tropics, we found Paris too cold, and after only three months we moved to Nice in the south of France. There I went to the Lycée des Jeunes Filles for five years, acted in school plays, and was recommended by a journalist, Mario Brun of the Nice "Matin."

It was to France's famed film director François Truffaut that Marie-France was introduced. He cast her in Love at Twenty, launching her on a career which includes roles opposite Jean-Paul Belmondo and Jean-Louis Trintignant. Before coming to Hollywood, Marie-France played the wife in the French hit Cousin, Cousine, now being shown in this country and scoring big.

French translation

When she arrived here some months ago to star in The Other Side of Midnight, she began learning her lines of dialogue by first translating them into French in order to get their full meaning. Subsequently, as her English improved, she abandoned the practice.

Studio officials thought for a while that she might object to the semi-nude love scenes the script required her to engage in with actors John Beck and Raf Vallone, but Marie-France says she never gave them a second thought.

"If a nude scene makes sense," she explains, "if it adds to the mood and the motives of the characters, if it is necessary for the story, I have no objections. After all, most people do not go to bed with their clothes on?

Like many young French actresses, Marie-France Pisier is a social activist. She took part in the revolt of the university students in Paris in 1968, "because," as she explains it, "it is most difficult to be young in Paris. French society is structured against the young. There are no jobs for university graduates. France has become a society for the middle-aged. Young people have to wait until they are in their 40's before they even get an opportunity.

"And as for equality of the sexes, there is very little. French women are underprivileged."

Last year, along with other prominent French women, Marie-France Pisier signed a petition in support of legal abortions. She regards herself as a devotee of the politics of the French left.

At the moment, however, she is caught up with her career. "After this film," she says, "I hope there will be more work for me. Acting is such an uncertain professionespecially in Paris."

The same holds true in Hollywood these days. For the likes of Marie-France Pisier, no long-term contracts. Just a burst of nublicity

Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar. But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

Teruo Hirose performs surgery on a man, 29, judged to have hopeless, moperable cancer. Working with incredible speed and without blood transfusions, Hirose successfully removed tumorous adrenal gland, one kidney, spleen, parts of three other organs. The patient was doing fine one week later and waiting to go home.

Surgeon of the Impossible

by Lawrence Galton

In the operating room of a New York City hospital, a surgeon works quickly, deftly to bypass a blocked coronary artery. The objective: to get more blood to the deprived heart and relieve the patient's crushing chest pains and incapacitation.

But this is no usual operation. The patient is a Jehovah's Witness who cannot accept blood transfusions and, because of that, has been turned down by a dozen other surgeons. For much blood can be lost during such an operation—just to prime the heart-lung machine, four to five pints of donated blood are needed.

But here very little blood is lost. And the machine is not primed with blood but with a solution containing only salts like those found in human blood. The patient comes through the operation and today is a rehabilitated man.

The surgeon: Tokyo-born, 51-yearold Teruo Hirose, well-described as the surgeon of the "impossible."

To date, "Terry"Hirose has saved the lives of 4500 Jehovah's Witnesses and thousands of other patients through surgery—not only of the heart but of the esophagus, stomach, bowel, blood vessels and cancers.

And Dr. Hirose declares quietly that he has never lost a single patient for lack of a blood transfusion.

His speed and skill are incredible. In a typical morning, between 8 and 11, he will carry out three or four major operations. A gastrectomy, or stomach removal, usually takes three hours; Hirose has been timed doing it in 23 minutes. He does a gallbladder removal in 15 to 20 minutes, an open-heart operation in as little as three hours. And his patients lose only one-tenth the usual amount of blood, or even less.

In Hirose's primary field of heart surgery, he has been responsible for major refinements and developments of techniques and for innovative approaches to solving life-and-death problems. Not only did he develop new methods for getting more blood to the front of failing hearts, he was first to find a way to get more blood to the previously unreachable back of the heart.

Appointments and grants

Now Clinical Professor of Surgery at New York Medical College, Hirose holds appointments at half a dozen hospitals in the New York area, including St. Barnabas, Flower and Fifth Avenue, Maimonides, and St. Vincent's; fellowships in numerous major medical and surgical associations; has received many National Institutes of Health and other research grants, and has written more than 100 medical articles.

A naturalized American citizen, Hi-rose is the son of a senator and vir minister of education who was strong, opposed to Japan's military regime—as was his uncle, the last consul-general of Japan in New York just before World War II.

And it was because of his own and his family's antimilitarism that Hirose came into medicine. He had started out to be a lawyer but during the war, with law offering no exemption from military service, he switched to medicine, not with any conviction that he wanted to become a doctor. He was two years along in medical school when he became firmly convinced.

Postgraduate work

He not only obtained his M.D. degree from Chiba University near Tokyo but went on to special postgraduate work and earned a Ph.D. degree in surgery. At Chiba he served his residency and surgical assistantship under Prof. K. Nakayama, one of the world's most distinguished esophageal and gastric surgeons. Between 1954 and 1957, he had training in general and cardiac surgery at American Hospital in Chicago and Hahnemann Hospital and Medical College in Philadelphia.

After two years in Japan, he returned permanently to the U.S. in 1959 to become Research Fellow in Advanced Cardiovascular Surgery at Hahnemann and then Teaching Fellow and Chief Resident in Surgery at New York Medical College.

One of Hirose's earliest major contributions was made in 1966. To get more blood to the heart of a patient with a blocked coronary artery, the internal mammary artery on the chest wall was then being used. It can be spared, freed from its position, and one end of it implanted in a tunnel in front of the heart. After a time, as blood oozes from the internal mammary into the heart muscle, little blood vessels in the muscle grow out to connect up with the artery, distributing the blood where it is needed.

Reaching behind the heart

But it soon became evident that for many patients, internal mammary implantation was not nearly enough. They had a blocked coronary behind the heart, needed blood there, and went into congestive heart failure for lack of it. The internal mammary couldn't reach behind the heart; there was no known way to get blood there.

Hirose, remembering his extensive gastric surgery training under Prof. Nakayama, hit upon the idea of using a stomach artery, the gastroepiploic. It can be spared from the stomach—which has enough circulation without it—and freed to reach the back of the heart for implantation. The method worked by itself in patients needing more blood only in back; it worked, together with internal mammary implantation, in those needing more circulation all over.

Every lawn mower, chain saw, garden tractor or other machine powered by a small engine represents a potential need for professional service and maintenance. NRI can give you the training you need to cash in on this opportunity... at home and in your spare time. You get the tools you need to trouble shoot and maintain two-cycle, four-cycle, diesel, outboard, air and water-cooled engines.

Only NRI supplies you with an Engine Component KR designed for training.

Hands-on experience comes quickly with the NRI Small Engine Repair Course. Along with the bite-size lessons tully illustrated, you receive all the components of a versatile 3½ HP Clinton Engine. Using NRI Power-On training principles, you assemble the complete engine, to use in your workshop or to install at a profit on one of your first jobs.

Where other courses give you inexpensive hand tools, NRI includes with its training an inductive tachometer, professional volt ohm meter, torque wrench, valve spring compressors, ring compressors, and all the wrenches and specialized tools you need to start your own repair shop.

Two Courses Australia

The 30-lesson Basic Repair Course covers the theory and practice of small engine operation and repair including lubrication, ignition, cooling, and starting systems. You specialize in professional lawn mower and other lawn-and-garden equipment repairs. You learn in depth . . . with up to 10 times as much information provided as in competitive courses.

With NRI's 45-lesson Master Repair Course, you move into more advanced training. Lessons cover chain saws, minibites, mopeds, outboard engines, snow-mobiles, golf carts, all-terrain vehicles, welders, generator sets, and other industrial equipment. plus six lessons on motorcycle repairs.

You learn the specific engine requirements for power take-ofts, charging systems, electrical systems, etc. Practical working knowledge of clutches, torque converters, transmissions, and other drive train parts gives you the professional's edge.

You Get More Training and More Equipment For Your Money With HRL.

NRI is the unquestioned leader in technical home training, with more than a million more training, with more than a million to over six decades of instructional service. The oldest and largest school of its kind in the country, NRI offers you expert help every step of the way. You'll move ahead at your own speed, earning as you learn, with small engine repairs for your family, friends, and neighbors.

After his demanding day, Hirose relaxes in heated pool and sauna in basement of his 26-room Riverdale, New York City, home, which also has rooms for billiards and table tennis.

CONTINUED

In 1968, with Dr. Charles P. Bailey of St. Barnabas Hospital, Hirose reported another advance. Good as it was, internal mammary implantation didn't help all patients with front-of-the-heart coronary blockage—even those who benefited often waited months before improvement began. Rather than implant the chest artery, Hirose and Bailey connected it directly to a diseased coronary artery beyond the clogged area.

There were dramatic results, with patients immediately showing striking improvement. Typically, the first patient, a 46-year-old New York cabdriver who had not benefited from earlier surgery and needed large doses of nitroglycerin to relieve his agonizing chest pain, was free of pain almost immediately after the new operation and soon back at work requiring no nitroglycerin.

That same year, Hirose carried out his first open-heart operation without blood—in a 6-year-old Jehovah's Witness boy with a hole in the wall between the two pumping chambers.

The child desperately needed surgery. Hirose decided to try. He was convinced that it is the surgeon himself who, by his planning and technical performance, generally determines the amount of blood loss. He believed that he could tie off securely every little bleeding vessel he had to cut through as he operated. That might slow the operation, but he had become so adept that the procedure might still take less time than conventional surgery.

Hirose was also convinced that the heart-lung machine, which would pump and oxygenate the child's blood while his heart was stilled for the operation, did not have to be primed with blood. Instead, a solution with body salts could substitute. It did not matter that the patient's blood, flowing through the machine, would become mixed with the solution. All the blood plus the solution could be returned to the patient at the end and the solution soon excreted while the blood remained.

It worked. The child came through well. It has since worked well in many other patients.

Hirose had other contributions to make to heart surgery: a special device to minimize red blood cell destruction caused by the heart-lung machine in extended operations; a special apparatus to get oxygen into red cells without any of the usual turbulent flow and frothing and with only one-fourth the usual amount of blood needed for priming the machine.

But it wasn't long before Hirose found himself having to go beyond heart'surgery.

A desperate call

One day he received a desperate call from the family of a Jehovah's Witness patient with a profusely bleeding ulcer and extreme anemia. She was hemorrhaging to death in a hospital, doctors unable to help because they saw no way to operate without transfusion. Hirose saved her, using the techniques he had developed for cardiac surgery.

One of his next non-cardiac Jehovah's Witness patients was a 23-year-old girl with ulcerative colitis advanced to the point of perforating the colon and producing peritonitis. Her temperature was spiking and she was unconscious, rapidly approaching death. Other surgeons had refused operation without transfusion. Hirose operated, removing all the pus and blood from the abdominal cavity and taking out the entire diseased colon. The girl recovered.

Another of Hirose's Jehovah's Witness patients was a young woman with a huge lung abscess that had destroyed a whole lobe. The lobe was removed and she is today a championship tennis player.

Hirose and wife Tomiko walk in their Japanese rock garden. Born in Tokyo, educated in Japan and the U.S., Hirose opposed Japanese militarism, is now a naturalized U.S. citizen.

The Hiroses in their Japanese guest room. The home contains lapanese- and American-style living quarters, plus offices.

All told, of Hirose's 4500 non-transfusion patients of the Jehovah's Witness faith, some 4000 have had non-cardiac surgery, including hysterectomies.

Hirose's work with Jehovah's Witnesses has benefited his other patients. In its place, blood transfusion can be tremendously valuable and life-saving. But there is always some risk, even if minimal, of hepatitis or other adverse reactions. When transfusion is needed, Hirose believes it should be used; but the need can often be avoided by careful operative technique. And, Jehovah's Witness or not, he rarely uses transfusions even for such operations as whole lung removals and bypasses of leg arteries.

A friendly, bubbling, enthusiastic man, Hirose maintains a back-breaking schedule and loves it. His mornings are taken up with surgery; his afternoons with rounds of patients in the various hospitals in which he operates, surgical conferences, seeing new patients, and carrying out diagnostic procedures. From 8 to 11 p.m., he sees patients at his home in Riverdale, The Bronx.

It's a magnificent home, with 26 rooms, including a separate wing for offices, another for American-style living and sleeping quarters and guest rooms, and still another containing a Japanese tearoom and Japanese-style sleeping facilities. Outside is a magnificent Japanese rock garden. There are also game rooms-for billiards, table tennis-and down below a 15 x 40-foot heated pool and sauna room which Hirose uses from 11 p.m., to midnight to refresh himself. He has married again recently after the death of his first wife some years ago, has a son in college.

Today, at 51, Hirose looks, works and acts like a 35-yearold. By all odds, he has many years ahead to help patients and to innovate. Which, as his patients who come from all over the country and even from abroad understandably see it, is a very good thing, indeed.

l love tobacco. I don't smoke.

Walt Garrison, football and rodeo star.

Well, because I use "smokeless tobacco." All it takes is a pinch of "smokeless" in between my cheek and gum. Feels real relaxing in there. And I get full, rich tobacco pleasure. Another thing is, "smokeless tobacco" can't tie up my hands. So I can use it no matter what I'm doing. If you'd like to go "smokeless," here's what you do. Just look for three great brands. There's Skoal, my favorite, which has a wintergreen taste. Copenhagen, a straight tobacco. And Happy Days Mint. All three dated for freshness. All three give you the tobacco pleasure you're looking for.

If I'm a guy who loves tobacco, how come I never take a puff?

There isn't any such thing, skeptics will say. Whereas the superstitious are apt to regard any stroke of extraordinary good fortune as miraculous.

In between these two viewpoints lies the basic truth of these supernatural events which everyone should strive to understand. Because mracles do happen. To deny their existence is to contradict the testimony of Holy Scripture, for it was by performing miracles that Jesus led men to recognize His divine mission.

A miracle is, in its simplest terms, a manifestation of supernatural power—a sign of divine presence...an event through which God strengthens our faith and moves us to improve our conduct.

If you'd like to know more about miracles, their purpose and how to recognize them, write today for our pamphlet entitled "Miracles — Signs of God's Favor." It will be sent free and nobody will call on you.

IS CARING the Fact

Feed Your Mind the Facts about Food FOOD DAY

If You Intend To Speculate

by Ira U. Cobleigh

n Jan. 31, here's what happened to three choice stocks: National Semi-conductor tumbled 3½ points to 19 (1976 high was 55¾), Heublein slipped 15½ points to 27½ (1976 high was 59¾), and Eastman Kodak fell to 74½ (1976 high was 124¾). What's so important about these downspins? Just this: we're in a bull market, but the accent has definitely shifted away from blue chips to lower-priced shares of smaller companies.

Our advice: if you're a speculator on the prowl for stocks that can ascend, shop among the under-$20 mini-stocks!

Mini-stocks are a special breed, found mostly among companies grossing below $40 million annually. While some may be listed on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), many more are found on the American Stock Exchange (Amex) and the Overthe-Counter Market (OTC). Are they risky? Of course! But using common sense, you don't have to be a professional Wall Street analyst to pick winners.

Your first step is to decide what industries are in an uptrend. That's not too difficult. For example, there's a fuel crisis. Accordingly, even quite small companies that are successful in exploration and production of oil and natural gas or possess extensive coal reserves should increase their profits in 1977-78. Such companies as Buttes Oil and Gas, Inexco Oil, Wilshire Oil and Mesa Petroleum come to mind. (These are all mentioned without a whisper of recommendation or endorsement and only by way of illustration.) In coal, such big companies as Pittston (NYSE) and Westmoreland (OTC) are followed by such smaller ones as General Energy (OTC).

Don't forget uranium. That may be the real energy of the future. Atlas Corp. (NYSE) has been in this business for years; so has United Nuclear (NYSE). Silver is rising in price, so a look at Asarco, Callahan and Hecla (all NYSE) may be worthwhile, espe-

Waste materials are a problem. Younger companies are emerging in this area: R.L.C. Inc. (Amex), with a technique for handling chemical wastes, and Waste Resources Inc. for more common waste disposal. Insurance stocks are also prospering, for example Jefferson Pilot (NYSE), Southwestern Life (OTC) and American Family (NYSE), a specialist in cancer insurance. In medical care, Humana and Affiliated Hospital trade under $20 and now report higher earnings.

Be mindful of the Wall Street adage, "Stock prices are the slaves of earning power." Choose stock in a sound company whose profits are growing by 15-20 percent a year, and you'll probably make money.

It pays to be bought out

Also, there's money to be made in companies likely to be bought out. In the past year stockholders in Sea World, Koehring, Milgo Electronics, and S. and S. Corporation (a maker of coal-mining machinery) have all gained 50 percent or more by "buy out" offers for their holdings.

If you can't seem to locate a particularly exciting industry, try this: Jot down the 10 stocks with the most active price uptrend on the Amex for a single week. Get the latest data on the five that attract you most. Then buy the two whose earnings are rising fastest. You may be surprised at the results.

It's best to diversify into three or four speculative stocks and own them outright (no margin buying). Remember that if you're trading in mini-stocks, use only money you can afford to lose.

On the Amex in 1975 there were 200 stocks that doubled. In 1976 the standout performer, Resorts International "B," rose from 2% to 221/2. Look for stocks like these. They are there, waiting to be detected.

Economist Ira U. Cobleigh is author of "Happiness Is a Stock That Doubles in One Your."

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY BY PETER DRYDEN

TO PRESERVE YOUR RECORDS: Phonograph records deteriorate through normal playing. New help is a dry lubricant you spray on, then buff. The coating is less than 3-millionths of an inch thick, has cleaning and anti-static properties, reduces needle wear and maintains high fidelity (claims the maker). Kit with material for treating both sides of 25 LP's $6.99 suggested retail price Ball Corp., Consumer Products Division, Dept. PP., 345 S. High St., Muncie, Ind. 47302. (above left)

FOR CAR AND HOME: You may find many uses for this handy combination of sponge, rubber squeegee, scraper and scrubber. Small enough to fit in most glove compartments, it serves for cleaning the windshield, scraping away frost and ice, clearing fogged windows inside the car. At home it can be used for washing and drying windows, mirrors, countertops, appliances. $2.59 Savage Corp., Dept. PP, 842 Linbard Lane, Birmingham, Ala 35226 (above right)

PEBBLE PLANT TRAY: You should be able to care for your houseplants more easily using this 12" x 24" x 2" plastic tray with ribbed bottom for strength. It holds pebbles, water, up to eight 6" or 32 2<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>" pots; and the plants can absorb the water as needed for days. In green, brown, black or white. $5 98 ppd. Franklin Products, Dept. PP, Box 1342, Bismarck, N Dak 58501 (above left)

STEREO RADIO CASSETTE RECORDER: Providing stereo sound for recording and playback, this compact unit has two 5" dual-cone speakers and two built-in condenser microphones. It can record stereo FM directly from a built-in tuner and allows you to monitor recordings with stereo headphones. Also featured are two telescopic antennas, meters to show tuning signal and playback level and battery power, tape counter to index recordings, and automatic level control. $199 ppd. Bruce Co., Dept. PP, Box 53, Cedar Grove, N.J. 07043. (above right)

VERSATILE SEWING AID: With a new craft board that opens to 18" x 48", you can adjust patterns, size and block needlecraft, pin down macrame work, enlarge patterns and pictures, create your own patchwork designs and make appliqués, embroidery, paper crafts and scallops (claims the maker). Printed on one side are 1/a" and 1" grid patterns with design medallion, tri-star and nine-patch square pattern for tracing; on the other side are diagonal, bias and other lines. $11.20 ppd. Fantastic Fit Products, Dept. PP, 1200 Mt. Diablo Blvd., Suite 321, Walnut Creek, Cal. 94596.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Testing TV Programs

Parents should select the TV programs their children watch. More than 50 studies have shown that youngsters develop more aggressive behavior by watching violent programs. So declares the California Medical Association's "Health Tips."

Citing Nielsen index figures, "Tips" says the average child has watched 15,000 hours of television and 18,000 video murders by high school graduation time. Moreover, children's TV programming averages six times more violence per hour than adult programming.

TV violence, the association asserts, is harmful to children in three ways:

- They learn and remember and many copy—aggressive behavior;
  - It is easier for them to be violent, and they are less anxious about it:

• It heightens, rather than "drains off," their aggressiveness.

A basic set of questions developed by San Francisco's Committee on Children's Television, Inc., should be asked by parents in choosing programs suitable for their children:

- Does the program appear suitable for the child's age level? Does it present conflicts that a child can understand? Are positive ways shown to resolve those conflicts?
- Does the program stimulate constructive activities and enhance the quality of a child's play?
- Does the program separate advertisements from program content?

- Does the program show racial groups and sex roles positivelu?
- Does the program present social issues that a child can understand, with worthwhile ideals, values and beliefs?
- Does the program have artistic qualities and a pace that allows the child to absorb and think about the material presented?

Immodesty

Students at Harvard, Yale and Princeton were polled on how they ranked themselves intellectually compared to President Jimmy Carter, who was graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, Class of 1947

At Harvard, half the students said they were brighter than Carter, at Princeton, 48 percent; and at Yale, 45 percent.

Drug Conviction

Last month Keith Richard. one of the Rolling Stones, was found guilty after a three-day trial in England of possessing cocaine.

Young girls jammed the courtroom to hear the verdicts. They cheered loudly as the jury foreman declared him not guilty on the first charge of possessing LSD. Hisses and boos greeted the second verdict: guilty of possessing a few grains of cocaine found in a sniffing tube in his car. Crucial evidence was a newspaper picture of Richard wearing a similar tube on a chain a few days before his arrest.

This was the second drug conviction for the 33-year-old guitarist. A third conviction in England inevitably calls for a iall sentence.

Also important is the possibility that Richard will lose his U.S. visa because of the drug conviction - undoubtedly the main reason why his lawver. Peter Rawlinson, will probably appeal the guilty verdict.

The Rolling Stones planned an American tour later this year, one almost guaranteed to earn millions. If Keith Richard is barred from entering the U.S., Rolling Stone vocalist Mick Jagger, who appeared at his trial, will have to hire a substitute guitarist in a hurry.

Much More?

Just how much more is More, the 120mm cigarette? Let's take a look.

More is longer. And burns slower.

That means there's more time to enjoy those Acra puffs of its smooth, mild taste.

More is styled leaner. And it's burnished brown.

More. It's like any really good cigarette.

And much more.

my favorite jokes

by jackie vernon

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jackie Vernon, talking about the rocky start of his career, recalls this funny and memorable happening: "When I was breaking into show business, working in some depressing cities, I used to carry a photo of Charlie Chaplin, my idol, and I'd talk to it Then I started writing him letters I'd start a letter on Monday and go through to Sunday night, like a diary, send it off to him, and start another. This went on for about two years.

"Ten years later, after I became successful on TV, I was booked into the Palladium in London and staying at the Savoy Hotel. One night the hotel manager said: 'Everyone's so excited. Charlie Chaplin and his wife are having dinner here.' I said: 'Oh, gosh, can I possibly meet him?' He said: 'I'll see if I can arrange it.', Then he returned and said: 'He'd love to meet you.' He introduced me, saying: 'Mr. Chaplin, this is Jackie Vernon, the young American comedian at the Palladium.' Chaplin looked up and said: 'Oh, yes, Jackie Vernon. Tell me, why did you stop writing?'"

Jackie will be entertaining at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas in April.

Here is some of his comedy:

I've got four kids and not one of them will come when I call. They'll probably grow up to be doctors.

My wife and I bought a waterbed and lately I find she's drifting away.

I knew there was a CIA agent at the company picnic when I saw this guy talking into a deviled egg.

I have absolutely no sense of direction. I get lost on escalators.

In my neighborhood most of the kids were muggers. I couldn't do it 'cause I was too shy.

Remember the old days when politicians started their campaign speeches with "If elected..." instead of "If convicted..."?

Sometimes I think the only things running smoothly in this country are the rivers. Well, they ought to—they're certainly well oiled.

A cosmetics company is coming out with a new hair-removal cream invented by an Air Force general. You put it on your legs and 30 minutes later each hair self-ejects.

We're living in what is known as The Space Age, and if you've ever ridden on public transportation you know how ridiculous that is.

I think it's terrible how some people spoil their children, like my neighbor. His son has the only sandbox with reclining seats.

My brother-in-law is on a new kick. It's called "Isometric Thinking." Every day he puts a pillow on the couch and presses his head against it.

I don't know what they're putting into pesticides today, but I just bit into an apple and the worm bit back.

My grandmother approached the century mark and we all made plans for a gala celebration. I said: "How would you like to go for a ride in an airplane?" She said: "I ain't going to ride in no flying machine. I'm just gonna sit here and watch television like the good Lord intended I should."

You know, most people think I was born in show business. I'm just happy that most people give me credit for being born.

My parents didn't have me baptized. They bought me a license.

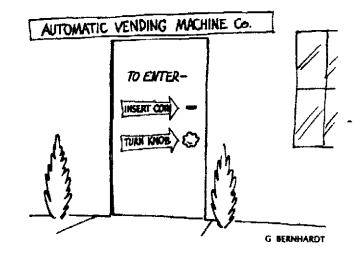

When I went to high school I was voted the most likely to go to college. I was also voted the most likely to flunk out.

I had to do something, so I enrolled in a trade school. On the third day I was traded to Louis' Third Street Gym and Delicatessen for two medicine balls, a day-old bagel and a midget wrestler.

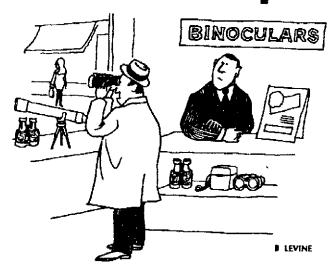

Malpractice insurance has become a specialized field. There are now eye, ear, nose and throat lawyers.

I was reading about a woman who has so many wrinkles she uses a facial cream called prune whip.

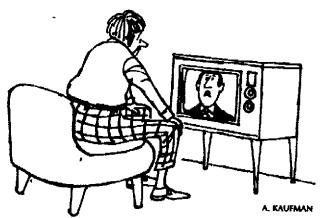

My uncle drank 20 martinis a day and died at the age of 94, and that was only because he got a bad olive.

it's to laugh

"Hey—how about that! A place down the street advertising binoculars for half price!"

"We interrupt this special bulletin to bring you an even more depressing special bulletin."

"This medicine has a side effect which may be hard to tolerate. It costs $13.75 which will make you leel irritable."
